Preparing For that Big Step: Quitting Smoking

By DAVID COTTER

WELL here we go with this, the first of a 13-part series in which freelance writer David Cotter describes his personal success in stopping smoking — and how you can, too. Today's story is introductory in nature and readers who want to quit smoking along with a number of Times newsroom employees in conjunction with the series, have until midnight on Oct. 10 to get geared up.

If you want to participate and you feel you'd like to go public with a declaration, drop a line with your name and address to "I quit, c/o The City-Editor, Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4."

We'll print your names and you'll join the Times employees who are giving up the nicotine habit. The series will appear in the Times each Monday with the exception of next week when it will appear Tuesday due to the Thanksgiving holiday.

An old man is picked out of the ashes of another rooming house fire. The usual verdict: Smoking in bed.

A high-ranking executive swears off cigarettes at 9 a.m. A martini at noon sends him howling for a puff.

In the intensive care unit of a hospital a tracheotomy victim smokes through a hole in his throat.

Tobacco — it's many things to many people. To most of those who use it, however, it is above all a dangerous habit they don't even like.

Times have changed since Mark Twain stopped quitting with a vengeance. Nine out of 10 people interviewed in a public health survey said they had tried to quit smoking in one, three or five days. You can now learn how to stop smoking in one, three or five days. You can stop through self-hypnosis and meditation. Clubs and clinics compete for the would-be quitter's dollars.

More than two million Canadians have stopped smoking. Millions more, however, continue to jump on the wagon with wild enthusiasm, only to scramble off in a cold sweat.

Why? For one thing, the problems of withdrawal are compounded by the false expectations and hopes raised by the quick-buck artists. For another, smokers suffer from their own misunderstanding of the nature of their habit and from their own fear of withdrawal. Too often, smoking is viewed as a purely physical problem, while in fact it consists of a fantastically interlocked chain of associations. Over the years, through constant repetition, it becomes a fundamental part of one's identity. Indeed, one smoker claimed that to smoke was to prove his existence.

While physical withdrawal lasts for roughly a week, general withdrawal usually lasts for about three months. It consists of tricks played by your mind to make you want to smoke. Some of the tricks resemble the symptoms of physical withdrawal.

Success in staying on the wagon depends almost entirely upon the attitudes and habits formed during those three months.

So let's be realistic and set Norman Vincent Peale aside. Positive thinking isn't enough. If it were, no one who honestly tried would have failed. Meditation won't do either. There will be days when you feel much too muddled to think, let alone meditate.

What about medical scare tactics? By now most of us know a few of the facts but the problem is that we don't really believe those nasty things can happen to us.

So if you want to be successful, you must master the habit and not just lock it in the closet. You can't run from it forever or rely on substitutes. Mastery here, as in any other field, depends upon persistence, practice, study and self-discipline.

This series will consist of 12 weekly columns designed to be with you step by step through this period, and to help you achieve mastery.

Tips on surviving and easing withdrawal will be offered with insights into the habit and its peculiar hold on you. Along with medical facts you'll find startling quotes that are guaranteed to put you off. And, since the adventure is a personal one, I'll drop in from time to time with stories of my own to make it easier for you.

For the rest of the week keep on puffing. But think about the habit. When you have time, list in detail all the reasons you can think of for quitting. Think about why you haven't so far. Make an effort to be conscious of each cigarette and focus on the actual taste and smell.

I suggest you write to the Non-Smokers' Rights Association, 455 Spadina Ave., Suite 404, Toronto, Ontario, M5S 2G7. On a short visit there, I was given a convincing assortment of buttons, stickers, posters, desk cards and useful information. Do yourself a favor and let them supply you with visual ammo.

In the past you may have reasoned that the time wasn't right for you yet. Rest assured, it never will be. Something will always be happening to provide you with an easy excuse.

By way of example, when I quit I was working on two novels, studying Japanese for one hour a day, working eight hours a day, conducting an unhappy romance and entering the final stage of a two-year legal struggle to regain something I'd lost.

It wasn't the best of times. Then again, once you've set your sights on winning you won't be deterred by hassles, long hours or strain.

Isn't it about time your body took a stand against a habit it hates?

Next week we begin. Relax. You're about to have an adventure. This time you're not alone.

84-Cent Dollar Dropping

The Canadian dollar continued sliding against its American counterpart in opening trading on international money markets today.

The dollar opened at 84.19 cents U.S. on Toronto's inter-bank wholesale market, almost a quarter-of-a-cent down from Friday's close of 84.43 cents.

At noon today in New York, the Canadian dollar stood at 84.29 cents.

Meanwhile, the Swiss National Bank's weekend announcement that it will intervene on foreign exchange markets to reduce the exchange value of the Swiss franc pushed the U.S. dollar up to 1.5955 francs today. It closed at 1.5495 Friday.

The bank said in a statement it will increase the purchase of large quantities of U.S. dollars, and other currencies if necessary, to achieve "a speedy and lasting fall in the clearly overvalued franc exchange rate."

The dollar also gained against the British pound and the Japanese yen but slipped slightly against the mark and the French franc.

The pound was weakened by speculation that the Labor party at its annual conference opening today might force a confrontation with Prime Minister James Callaghan's government over its insistence on a five-per-cent limit in pay increases.

Charred Debris Raked

AYER'S CLIFF, Que. (CP) — Police continued their search today for three bodies in the burned-out Ripplecove Inn, where an early-morning fire Sunday claimed eight other victims, all members of a visiting Barrie, Ont., group.

The group, whose 47 members ranged in age from 65 to 80, were on the final day of a four-day trip to view Quebec's autumn foliage.

An all-day police search of the scene turned up the eight bodies. Three more members of the group remain unaccounted for, and police still expect to find their remains.

Late Sunday, 28 grief-stricken survivors of the Barrie Horticultural Society returned home on a plane chartered by the bus company which had brought them to this resort, 130 kilometres southeast of Montreal.

Eight other survivors remained overnight in hospital in nearby Sherbrooke.

The group had arrived from Quebec City on Friday. About half checked into the main building of the colonial-style resort, with the moving into the surrounding cottages.

Those who died were in the main building. Half the group, those who were in the two smaller buildings, weren't affected by the fire.

Off and Running To Port Hardy...

At Forrest of Times... interview on run with Howie

Al Howie is off and running for Port Hardy to raise funds for the United Way.

Howie, 33, sprinted away early this morning from the Crystal Pool and hopes to complete the 375-kilometre run within a week at the rate of 80 kilometres per day.

That's the equivalent of nearly one marathon before lunch and another one afterwards.

Howie has been keeping in shape by swimming every morning at Crystal Pool, followed by a marathon run during the day.

He was running for health — his own. But then he got the idea it would make the running more fun if he could help others as well. So he is seeking pledges to the United Way campaign.

All funds pledged for the Al Howie run go to United Way charities. Pledges can be made by phoning United Way at 385-6738 or in person.

There's $100 promised so far to the United Way by one individual. If Howie makes it and campaign officials are hopeful more people will come forward.

Howie selected Port Hardy because it is at the far tip of Vancouver Island from Victoria.

Born in Scotland, Howie ran as a schoolboy but gave it up at 18 in favor of soft living and heavy smoking.

"Then one day, when I was 26, I suddenly realized what I was doing to myself. I was smoking two packs a day and I wasn't getting any exercise at all."

"I quit smoking and started running. I felt better immediately." Howie is travelling light to Port Hardy, with only the clothes he is wearing. He has taken some money for food and hotels but hopes he meets some folks along the way who will give him shelter for the night because all expenses are coming out of his own pocket.

"I don't have a job at the moment and I don't have a lot of money. I have been a stonemason and a foundry worker. I hope to find a job soon."

Meanwhile, $125,000 has been raised after the first week in the United Way campaign. The target is $926,500.

Times News Service

BEIRUT — Syrian commandos, advancing under cover of night and the heaviest local artillery and rocket barrage in three years, today rescued 50 Syrian soldiers trapped by Christian militiamen in east Beirut.

Rightists said 32 Lebanese were killed and more than 200 wounded in the overnight flareup.

Sixteen buildings were demolished and 61 apartments set on fire as Syrian peace-keeping troops and Christian forces pounded each other with rockets, mortar and artillery fire.

Prompted by the new surge of violence, President Elias Sarkis has called for formation of an emergency coalition government.

Sarkis, in a desperate bid to stop the fighting, announced "an emergency security plan" that included a call for a new government to be made up of "the principal Lebanese personalities."

Sarkis, in a clear reference to the Christian rightists, blamed the fighting on "certain factions... that provoke the Arab peacekeeping force and then exploit the sensitivities which arise with any borrowed (Syrian) security force."

Minutes later, right-wing former president Camille Chamoun issued a terse counter-declaration, saying: "The only thing that remains now for Sarkis to do is resign."

A Syrian communiqué today said the trapped Syrian soldiers, including seven seriously wounded men, had been cut off for two days. The two-hour rescue operation was carried out after negotiations with Christian political leaders failed to obtain release of the men, and militiamen opened machine-gun fire on the beleaguered unit in violation of the ceasefire agreement, the communiqué said.

A Christian spokesman charged that the Syrians broke the truce Sunday afternoon with an abortive attempt to get through to the besieged troops, who were trapped in a pharmacy they took over during a ceasefire that began Saturday.

CARTER TO EGYPT

CAIRO (AP) — President Carter will come to Egypt to witness the signing of the peace treaty between Egypt and Israel, President Anwar Sadat said today.

No date has been set for the visit, which officials say would depend on how fast Egyptian and Israeli negotiators can work out steps to implement the accords.

SPORTS

With their baseball season suddenly reduced to a single playoff game, Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees were battling in Boston today for the American League East pennant. The teams finished their regular season in a tie Sunday when the Red Sox blanked Toronto Blue Jays 5-0 while the Yankees were being whipped 9-2 by Cleveland Indians. Page 14.

American League batting champion Rod Carew vowed Sunday he would never again play baseball for Minnesota Twins after hearing of alleged remarks by club owner Calvin Griffith. Page 14.

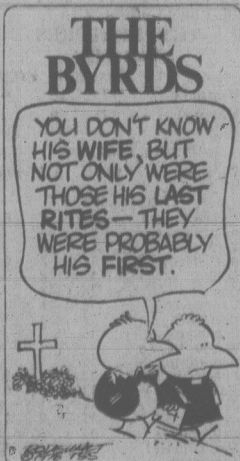

Saskatchewan Roughriders have given the B.C. Lions a stay of execution in the Western Football Conference. Defeated by Winnipeg Blue Bombers Saturday, the Lions had better luck Sunday. That was because the Roughies tripped Calgary Stampede, leaving the Lions with slightly better hopes of making the playoffs. Page 15.

Dr. Gil Morgan may be happy today that he never got around to practising optometry. Morgan picked $100,000, the richest prize in professional golf, Sunday at Akron, Ohio, by winning the World Series of Golf, beating Hubert Green on the first hole of a playoff. Page 20.

Perhaps nervous because they were opening their Western Hockey League season on home ice, Victoria Cougars missed many chances Saturday, but still managed a 5-4 victory over Calgary Wranglers. Page 14.

Mario Andretti, this year's world driving champion, was thwarted by a blown engine Sunday in his bid to become the first American winner of the U.S. Grand Prix as Argentine Carlos Reutemann charged to a big early lead and coasted home to an easy triumph at Watkins Glen, N.Y. Page 12.

19-Storey Plunge After Lift Fails

CALGARY (CP) — A city woman plunged 19 floors to her death when she tried to jump from a stalled elevator in an apartment building.

Donna Moore, 29, and four companions were returning to her apartment at about 2:30 a.m. when the elevator in which they were riding stopped between the 19th and 20th floors.

Police said the five managed to crawl out of the elevator and while Moore's companions successfully jumped six feet from the elevator to the 19th floor Moore slipped when she landed on the floor, lost her balance and fell.

WINDSOR POSTIES AGAIN PICKET

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — About 40 of Windsor's 270 letter carriers were back on picket lines today saying they are dissatisfied with a tentative agreement reached last week between their union's national executive and the federal government.

John David, president Local 16 of the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada in Windsor, said the membership is getting a snow job from the national executive.

"It's not even a settlement as far as we're concerned."

He said Local 16 executive officers voted 9 to 4 Sunday to resume strike action. Local members meet tonight.

He said local executive officers from District 6, which covers most of southwestern Ontario, voted unanimously Sunday to reject the tentative agreement.

David accused the national leaders of selling out the membership by agreeing to terms that he said were less than what the government previously had offered.

"It's not even worth taking to the membership," he said. "Something has got to be done with our national office and we're going to start the ball rolling right here."

The national office has distributed a four-page report to members summarizing the tentative settlement.

Finn's Hijack Ends In Confusion

HELSINKI (AP) — Seven hours after Finnish police let a hijacker go home with his pistol and part of a ransom to spend a last night with his wife Sunday, they stormed the man's house and arrested him.

The hijacker, a building contractor who recently went bankrupt, forced the crew of a Finnish jet to fly 4,800 kilometres up and down Finland and as far south as Holland before releasing the last of his 48 hostages Sunday. No one was hurt.

Along the way 37-year-old Aarno Lamminporras collected $206,000 in ransom from Finnair and a Helsinki newspaper.

Authorities said they could determine no clearcut motive for the crime, but during one of the plane's stops, he demystified and got two bottles of whisky.

Nor was there any explanation why police stormed his home in Oulu, 560 kilometres north of Helsinki, seven hours after agreeing to his demand that he be allowed to spend Sunday night with his wife and surrender today.

Authorities said the hijacking began about 4 p.m. local time Saturday afternoon when Lamminporras entered the cockpit of the Finnair Super-Caravelle during a flight from Oulu to Helsinki, and pointed a pistol at the pilot.

The plane landed at Helsinki, flew back to Oulu, returned to Helsinki, flew to the Netherlands, then back to Helsinki and finally landed back in Oulu. Lamminporras freed 34 of those aboard during the first stop in Helsinki, 11 on the second stop, including a lawyer he had demanded be brought aboard, and the last three in Oulu after the government agreed to let him go home for the night.

Witnesses said the gunman appeared haggard as he was led away in handcuffs by black-jacketed police who sent police dogs into the house first and then followed them in.

If convicted of armed hijacking, Lamminporras could get two to 12 years in prison.

Smith Visa Issue Still Unsettled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four days after President Carter said Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith would probably be given a visa for the United States and one day after the State Department indicated that he would not, Smith still could not be certain Sunday whether to make the controversial visit.

The administration has not reached a final decision on visa applications from Smith and three black members of Rhodesia's executive council, State Department press officer Kenneth Brown said Sunday in response to a reporter's questions.

Brown had said Saturday that the State Department could not grant Smith a visa at this time. But that was only "an interim decision", the press officer said Sunday.

Brown emphasized that his statement did not mean that Smith had been refused a visa. Neither did it mean, he quickly added, that Smith would be granted a visa. It meant, he explained, that the application, submitted Sept. 20 and the subject of intense debate since then, was still pending.

The handling of the "interim decision" fanned suspicions by Smith supporters in Washington that the State Department would feel more comfortable in dealing with the application after Oct. 14, the date when Congress is due to recess. Smith reportedly hopes to press his case in person to members of Congress.

Confronted by an escalating guerrilla war in Rhodesia, Smith brought three African nationalist politicians, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau into the ruling executive council in March and promised free elections leading to majority rule.

The principal sponsor for the Smith visa application has been Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, (Republican-Calif.), who has been pressing the State Department to approve a visa so that Smith and Sithole could arrive here Monday.

Meeting with reporters on Wednesday, President Carter replied to a question by saying, "My guess is that the State Department would approve the visas on a tourist basis, not as a matter that would imply diplomatic recognition of Rhodesia."

While that comment revived the hopes of Smith supporters, it did not decide the issue at the State Department. "We did not receive that as an instruction," Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs Richard M. Moose said Friday.

Search Off

The puzzling search by Canadian and U.S. authorities for a life raft carrying 12 survivors of a sinking yacht has been called off, a spokesman for the U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said in Seattle today.

The search was set off when a "ham" radio operator received a distress message from a liferaft supposedly carrying 12 survivors from a U.S. 12-meter sailboat called the Fathom Blue which had sunk off Cape Flattery. Later an identical signal gave the location as off the coast of Greenland.

Fierce Beirut Battle

The Syrians said they stopped shooting after the rescue, but the Christians said they were battling Syrian forces for two major bridges that control the northern approaches to the Christian sector of Beirut.

The heavy barrage subsided at daybreak today, but all routes into Christian east Beirut were blocked by Syrian roadblocks and sniper fire. Telephone connections were also cut, and reporters in the Muslim western half of the city could not get through.

Police estimated that 215 civilians had been killed and about 500 wounded in fighting since Wednesday that has clogged East Beirut's morgues and hospitals and drained blood banks.

The Christians said more than 30 bodies were pulled from the rubble of collapsed buildings in one area during the lull in fighting.

U.S. President Carter and Kurt Waldheim, UN secretary-general, issued a joint statement urging universal observance of a ceasefire.

DEPORTATION SET

KELOWNA (CP) — Two East Indian men illegally in Canada are to be deported to India rather than face rape charges.

A saving of possibly $100,000 was one among the reasons why deportation was favored over prosecution, according to Crown attorney Marty Johnson.

Another reason for staying the charges was the language problem between the victim, who speaks mainly French, and the accused who only speak Punjabi, he said.

Jagdish Morque, 26, and Kuldip Singh, 22, were charged in provincial court Sept. 15 with rape, indecent assault and unlawful confinement of an 18-year-old Kelowna woman.

When it was discovered the two were in Canada illegally, an immigration adjudicator ordered them deported Sept. 19 if the Crown decided to stay proceedings.

A third man, Resham Lal Bhatti, 23, was also charged with rape and unlawful confinement stemming from the same incident and will appear for a preliminary hearing.

I'm John Reynolds, and I believe you should have a say in which channels are available to you on cablevision

The CRTC has issued several decisions that may affect the number of U.S. TV stations you'll be able to receive on your cable system at home. What they say is:

"The Commission has decided that it will, as a general rule, no longer approve applications for the carriage of more than four U.S. signals, at least one of which must be the signal of a non-commercial station". (July 17, 1978)

One possible outcome of the October 24th CRTC hearings in Vancouver might be the removal of some U.S. stations from the present line-up of cable channels on your TV dial.

I urge you to make your wishes known. Complete both coupons and send right away to:

Next Pontiff to Be the Last?

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The unexpected death and short reign of Pope John Paul I sent many Romans thumbing through the writings of ancient soothsayers who, interpreted in retrospect, appear to have predicted a brief pontificate for a "barefoot pope" at this point in history.

When John Paul was elected Aug. 26, interpreters of the two best-known prognosticators — 16th-century French doctor-astronomer Nostradamus and 12th-century Irish archbishop St. Malachy — seem to have found signs of a reign lasting only 34 days.

But prophecy specialists now say Nostradamus predicted that following the death of a pope of a 15-year reign, there would be a "two-year period of short pontificates." During that time, the church is supposed to undergo a period of grave crisis and even schism. Pope Paul VI reigned 15 years before his death Aug. 6.

Nostradamus wrote cryptically, however, and his works are open to various interpretations. The proliferation of books on his writings are always in great demand in Italy, particularly in times of stress.

Nostradamus predicted events that are supposed to lead up to the end of the world in the year 2000. He mentioned in The Prophecies of Pope John a "barefoot pope" whose reign would last "no more than two months" and who would be succeeded by "the last two popes."

According to The Prophecy of St. Malachy, attributed to Malachy, archbishop of Armagh, there will be only three more popes.

Just 35 days ago, believers in St. Malachy's writings said his symbol for the new pope, "de mediate lunae" (of the middle of the moon) referred to the half-moon shape of the lagoon city of Venice, where John Paul had served as patriarch.

Now, they say, the epithet might really refer to the length of his reign — a lunar cycle of about 28 days starting from Sept. 3, the day of his formal installation as pope, and ending with his death Sept. 26. The day of the full moon, Sept. 16, fell exactly in the middle of his pontificate.

Who will be the next pope, according to the soothsayers?

Nostradamus describes him as "floram pater" reigning in a period of divided faith. If the enigmatic word "floram" is the result of a printer's error in writing "florum," this would mean "father of flowers," perhaps meaning a good pope.

According to Malachy, the next pope will be "de labore solis," of the fatigue of the sun. That could be a reference to the sunny homeland of Salvatore Cardinal Pappalardo, archbishop of Palermo, or Corrado Ursi, archbishop of Naples, both mentioned as papal candidates.

300,000 Defy Rain To File Past Body Of Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — An estimated 300,000 people paid their last respects to Pope John Paul I in St. Peter's Basilica on Sunday.

The huge crowd braved pelting rain to file past the body after it was brought from the papal palace to a catafalque in front of the main altar of the basilica.

The outpouring of affectionate grief was attributed to the brevity of John Paul's 34-day reign, cut short by a heart attack in his bed Thursday night, to the infectious grin and laughter with which he responded so frequently, and to the informality and humility that were characteristic of his brief pontificate.

Meanwhile, cardinals arriving for the funeral Wednesday said they will seek a successor with the same pastoral background.

"Everyone wants a pastoral pope like the one who just passed away, a pope who speaks a language everyone understands," said Timothy Cardinal Manning on his arrival from Los Angeles.

The Congregation of Cardinals is meeting again today to prepare for the open-air funeral mass Wednesday on the steps of St. Peter's and the conclave to elect a new pope beginning Oct. 14.

The Vatican announced that the Pope will be buried in a stone sarcophagus in the grottoes of St. Peter's, opposite the tomb of Pope Paul VI and not far from Pope John XXIII, his two immediate predecessors.

ULSTER KILLING ARMY 'ERROR'

BELFAST (AP) — The British Army admitted Sunday that soldiers killed an innocent member of a hunting party but said the troops believed themselves threatened by terrorists.

An army statement extended sympathy to the family of surveyor James Taylor, 23, and said: "It now appears that the civilians had been wildfowling, were carrying firearms and were not engaged in any criminal activity." Taylor was killed Saturday.

But Taylor's uncle, Given Shuter, who was present at the incident near Coagh, 40 kilometres west of Belfast, said the shooting followed an argument between Taylor and two companions and the soldiers.

He said the hunters found the tires of their car deflated, walked to his house to borrow a pump and rode with him to their car. They were followed by two cars carrying strangers who were not in uniform, Shuter said.

The hunters accused the strangers of letting the air out of their tires, an argument developed, and Taylor was shot, he said. Taylor brings the known death toll in the British province to 1,864 in the sectarian war.

Prisoner Killed

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A prisoner was shot and killed by a guard during an escape attempt Sunday at the Prince George Regional Correctional Centre.

The man had been remanded on a murder charge, laid in Dawson Creek earlier this year.

The incident occurred as prisoners at the provincial institution were being released into an exercise area, he said.

Two prisoners broke away from the group and started to scale a gate.

When a warning shot was fired, one of them surrendered by climbing to the ground while the other continued over the gate.

The prisoner hid behind a building and then attempted to climb another gate, when he was shot by a prison guard.

Sessions in "contact improvisation" are being offered by modern dancer and teacher, Shirley Rolland, at her studio, 536 Broughton. The classes will be held on Wednesdays from 6:15 p.m. to 7:45 p.m. She is also conducting classes in intermediate modern dance at the same hour on Thursdays.

Contact improvisation is a form of movement for dancers and non-dancers. It is physically vigorous, enabling participants to develop strength and co-ordination. It requires concentration, is exhilarating, spontaneous and non-sexist.

Trucks' Canada Signs Get Council's Veto

DELTA (CP) — Len Rempie says he's a patriot and isn't afraid to let the world know, but council in this municipality just southeast of Vancouver isn't happy with the way he's chosen to put the message across.

Rempie has the Canadian flag on the side of his fleet of Haul-Away garbage trucks.

Rempie, 46, said he had the 1.5-by-2.5-metre plywood signs put on the 24 trucks as part of Canada Week celebrations and decided to leave them on to express his love of country. Some have since been removed because of damage, but about 10 trucks are still rolling with the message.

"The wording under the flag is to cause people to think about the country they live in, to cause them to stop and think about their heritage," he said.

It is the wording that caused Delta council to vote last week to ask Rempie to remove the signs from the trucks. It was suggested that the motto was borrowed from those reacting against anti-war protesters in the United States and that it reflects an intolerant attitude to those who might have some criticism of Canada.

As a result, Rempie said he will design a new sign, keeping the flag but using a new slogan which he has not yet made public.

"The new slogan will be unique," he said. "It is something that I have not seen or heard before."

"I admit the last one was not as original as it could have been. The new one will be from the heart."

Rempie said public reaction has run evenly for and against the signs. Some of those opposed hinted that they may be former U.S. draft dodgers who were unhappy with the wording of the sign, he said.

Others were cynical. "They seem to think that the guy who is patriotic is going to gain something. They don't believe he can just be a patriot."

Distinction Has to Be Made

There is sometimes a fine line between an MLA exercising his responsibility to his constituents to help them thread the maze of red tape that insulates the bureaucracy of government from the public, and throwing his weight around as an elected politician to obtain special favors for himself or friends. The dividing line may blur sometimes, but the distinction is still there, and it must be observed if politics is not to degenerate into a free-for-all.

It is good to see that at least ICBC general manager Robbie Sherrell recognizes it, even if most of the provincial legislators who grilled him last week do not. He was attacked by members of the special Crown corporations review committee because of a personal policy not to discuss insurance claims with MLAs. The vehemence of some legislators who should know better was astounding.

"This is a horrible state of affairs," George Mussallem, the Sacred representative for Dewdney, was reported to have said.

Elwood Veitch, the Social Credit chairman of the committee, threatened to convene "many more of these meetings in order to deal with Sherrell effectively, if that is his attitude."

Even Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said he was "amazed and shocked" by Sherrell's policy and demanded he reverse himself and take phone calls from MLAs.

How short their memories are! The general manager's explanation, that he wanted to insulate the corporation from political interference, is plain common sense. Even an aggrieved motorist with a bent fender who's been cold-shouldered by lower-level claims takers should understand the principle here. MLAs who cannot must be exceedingly thickheaded.

The unpleasant scandal involving MLA George Kerster a year ago cannot have been forgotten so quickly, can it? Although the Sacred member for Coquitlam was exonerated (by a partisan vote of the Sacreds who formed a majority on the committee) of any wrongdoing, he still appeared guilty of very bad judgment.

He pestered then-ICBC general manager Norman Bortnick and other ICBC officials to make some decision on claims involving two vehicles; one of them owned by Surrey Dodge which Kerster formerly managed. Committee hearings disclosed that he had made other interventions as well, enough to warrant a memo to the general manager telling of "the sensitive nature of previous operational matters" involving Kerster, and "other altercations" with the corporation.

All may have been completely innocent encounters, but the impression left by the affair enhanced neither ICBC's reputation nor the MLAs'.

NDP member Dennis Cocke's support of Sherrell's decision not to talk to MLAs was very apt: "I see no reason why a person who comes to Dennis Cocke should have a better access to top ICBC officials than someone who acts on his own."

PM: Isolated from Everyone

OTTAWA — The cabinet minister stared so hard through a window of the Rideau Club, which overlooks Parliament Hill, that a friend asked him why. "I'm watching the prime minister's office to see if I can lip-read Coutts and Pitfield to find out what our policies are."

A joke that wasn't intended just as a joke. Rub many ministers these days, and out will pour bitterness at the way Trudeau has cut almost all lines of communication to himself except those that go through privy council clerk Michael Pitfield or principal secretary Jim Coutts. Rub a little harder and from many of those around Trudeau will come expressions of concern whether he is entirely himself these days.

To speculate about a Prime Minister's state of mind is a bit presumptuous. Who really knows? Even a Prime Minister can be gloomy and grumpy on a particular day for no grander reason than that he got out of the wrong side of the bed.

What's on His Mind?

Then there's Margaret. She's back again, in Ottawa and in People magazine, talking about "my bum." Again, who really knows. An aide says only, cautiously and unwillingly, "let's just say that Margaret does tend to have an unsettling influence."

Let's leave Margaret out of this, and stick to the facts.

Trudeau indeed has been behaving out of character. Trudeau slapped together his new economic program in such frantic and unnecessary haste that he humiliated his cabinet ministers by letting the public know he hadn't bothered to consult them.

Having shown himself to be decisive, Trudeau then demonstrated his indecisiveness. For four weeks, Trudeau dithered about whether to call or to call off an election.

Lastly, by fudging his policy on capital punishment, largely at Coutts' urging, Trudeau has managed to lose friends without influencing any of his enemies.

His performance, in sum, has been not so much inept as distracted, disconnected, distant. Like that of someone who's been getting out of the wrong side of the bed, each day.

At a recent press conference, Trudeau revealed an aspect of his character that he seldom does. Pessimism. "People think it's easy to run a government. Perhaps we should throw a few hot potatoes at them and see if they can live with the results."

There may be more to those comments than the transitory despondency of a leader in political trouble. Trudeau has been profoundly impressed by the just-published book — he took it with him on his holidays — An Inquiry Into the Human Prospect, by U.S. social critic Robert Heilbroner. In it, Heilbroner writes of the west as being gripped by "a civilizational malaise," and worries that authoritarian governments may have to replace democratic ones "to get us through the gauntlet ahead."

As well, there is the corrupting effect of power, which Trudeau has exercised for almost 11 years. When I asked an aide why Trudeau remains in office, he replied, "Because he enjoys the position," and not, revealingly, to Save Canada or to cap his career with a new constitution.

Power is a drug that few give up willingly. Perhaps, like many addicts, Trudeau has become desensitized to the consequences of his actions.

The certain change in Trudeau is that he is now a solitary. Coutts and Pitfield are among the very few who can really connect with him.

"For about a year now, the cabinet has ceased to exist except in name," says an insider. "Ministers run their own departments but they no longer pretend to be collectively running the government."

The blame here is as much the cabinet's as Trudeau's. He acted alone in August because his ministers had failed to act collectively. If Trudeau is too austere and too shy to be able to reach out to his ministers and draw them into a partnership with him, they are too intimidated by Trudeau to reach out to him, as partners rather than as juniors. Not one minister, for example, dared to phone Trudeau to complain about being excluded from economic decision-making.

All by Himself

Of this solitary cause and victim. Gone are the senior ministers, Bud Drury and Mitchell Sharp, with whom he once had almost a son-father relationship. Gone are the ministers he listened to with the greatest respect, Donald Macdonald and John Turner. Gone are his personal friends who could talk to him as equals, Gerard Pelletier and Jean Marchand. Gone, lastly, is Margaret.

"Don't let yourself think he is any less brilliant, any less vital, any less resilient," says an intensely loyal but intensely anguished aide. "But my God, he is isolated."

The corruption of isolation rather than of power, and perhaps as well a dark inner doubt whether the democratic centre is going to be able to hold, has, it seems, desensitized Trudeau to the consequences of his actions. In the end, if Trudeau seems not to be entirely himself it is because, these days, he is almost entirely by himself.

Best of All Worlds

With the last set of negotiations with the B.C. Buildings Corporation triumphantly concluded, the Greater Victoria library board appears to have won for itself the best of all possible worlds.

It will be able to begin within a matter of months to move its overcrowded central library to sparkling new quarters in the just-finished red brick provincial government building at Blanshard and Broughton.

Yet, now that BCBC has agreed to include a strata title purchase option in the board's lease of those premises, it will also be able to begin to move towards owning its part of that building, rather than forever paying rent without gaining any equity.

It will be able to exercise the purchase option any time within the next 15 years so the board will be able to move as quickly or as slowly as it wishes towards that end, without being under any pressure.

Everyone has agreed for years that the library needs a new building downtown. The only question has always been: what is the best way to get it?

Earlier this year the library board thought the proposal to lease part of the provincial building — at $400,000 a year — was the best arrangement that could be managed since building an entire new building would be a long, difficult and exceedingly expensive process.

But a majority of Esquimalt council and a significant minority on the other three councils that belong to the library system — Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay — did not find this an acceptable solution. They were upset that they would end up paying BCBC $4 million in rent over the next 10 years but end up with nothing to show for it except a stack of receipts.

Most of the politicians who voted in favor of the lease arrangement agreed with this argument too, but felt the desperate need of the library for new quarters overruled it.

The strata title option should meet both sides' needs. The library will not be delayed in a move to a new building for a day longer than it would have been had the straight lease been accepted.

But the board will have a chance to own its own premises. Moreover, it will probably be less expensive than an entire new building would be and lie at an ideal location.

Library board chairman Gordon Hutchison and building committee chairman Ald. Murray Glazier deserve credit for the work they have done to provide our city's library with this opportunity.

Two Tell Trudeau He's Issue

OTTAWA — The action of two ministers, including one from Quebec, in warning the prime minister recently that his current surge of unpopularity has become a detrimental election factor for the Liberals clearly indicates the rise of tensions within his party.

The warnings, it is now known, were delivered with some reluctance when Trudeau called a meeting of his "political cabinet" the week before last at the government's occasionally-used retreat at Meach Lake. They came from Len Marchand, the Kamloops-Cariboo member who is minister of state for the environment, and National Health and Welfare Minister Monique Bégin.

This in itself is a marked change from the situation of 1972 when the prime minister was going through another of his periods of unpopularity and nearly lost the election. There was concern then and dissatisfaction with the strange sort of non-campaign the prime minister was waging but the party was still solidly behind him. There was, for that matter, about as much dissatisfaction with Bryce Mackasey and the new unemployment insurance system as with Trudeau. After the period of minority government, in the 1974 election, the party was firm — Trudeau was fighting and his followers were fighting with him.

Is It Time to Go?

Now however if Trudeau is going both to stay on as party leader and go into the next election campaign with a solid organization behind him he has an enormously difficult turnaround to pull off. This time there are a great many Liberals who believe the prime minister should realize that, after 10 years, he has achieved whatever he can as head of government and that he should understand that the time has come to move aside in favor of a successor.

It was after all Trudeau himself, in an earlier phrase, who used to say publicly that in the modern world with all of its complexities all national leaders were likely to find that they had made whatever contribution they were capable of in eight or 10 years and that after that they should step aside. Long possession of power, of course, undermines such realistic assessments in the minds of most men who come to relish high office.

Marchand was the first at Meach Lake to issue his sombre warning. As outsiders now know, he reminded the prime minister that he has ministerial responsibility for the conduct of six ridings in the B.C. interior and said that months ago he felt confident that Liberals would do well in them. Now, however, he recognized that five of the six ridings were probably lost and that he would have a difficult fight to retain his own seat. All reports of the incident agree that tears formed in his eyes as he went on and warned that Trudeau himself is the issue, the problem that has replaced confidence over those six ridings with gloomy pessimism.

Bégin followed, telling Trudeau that the same sort of rumblings were now being heard in Quebec, traditionally the great Liberal fortress which political attackers so rarely breach. Rumblings of the sort which concern Marchand in the more volatile British Columbia political environment are a highly significant development when they occur in Quebec. They probably have much to do with the emergence of Claude Ryan, the provincial Liberal leader who has become the focus of federalism in the province and who looks very much as if he would set René Lévesque and the Péquistes back on their heels. The inevitable consequence is to leave the prime minister's Quebec followers with a greater feeling of freedom to make their political assessments on the same grounds other Canadians do, primarily economic problems.

LEN MARCHAND
... tears in his eyes

It is significant, too, that all accounts of this affair agree that the prime minister's chief Quebec lieutenant, Inter-governmental Affairs Minister Marc Lalonde remained silent after Bégin's intervention and did not dispute her statement. The prime minister thanked his two ministers for their information and moved on to other matters.

At the same time that dissatisfaction with Trudeau's leadership is becoming more vocal in the party, there have been reports emanating from well-placed insiders that the Liberals are encountering much more difficulty than usual in raising campaign funds. Liberals, at least, are convinced that the Conservatives are finding their fund-raising efforts encountering much less resistance and the statements of Tory finance men support this. The head of one great business organization, always a generous contributor to the Liberals, is known to have said lately that "I won't give them a penny as long as he's there." He meant, of course, as long as Trudeau stays. He may well consider it politic to change his stand when the general election is at hand but he would not have made the same statement in 1972.

Turner to Plunge In?

Inevitably the rise in dissatisfaction with Trudeau has turned many Liberal eyes in the direction of John Turner, who remains a public figure even back in private law practice. Even Conservatives concede freely — they often volunteer the view — that if Turner were to replace Trudeau he would turn matters around politically to such an extent that the general election would be mightily affected. The danger, indeed, is that the change might be excessive, with Turner arousing expectations that he would have great difficulty in fulfilling, the fate of Trudeau himself in 1968.

Turner certainly retains political ambitions but it is a misconception to picture him as a hungry man standing in the wings as he waits for a call. His return to the law has been enormously successful and this has left him much more ambivalent about politics than many of his supporters or his detractors believe.

Unless the government is much more successful in the byelections than most politicians expect, we are probably at the threshold of a period of remarkably interesting internal Liberal party politics.

A Mockery

As a simple matter of social interest and commentary, may the following apparently newsworthy items published during the past few days now be recalled together for further relative consideration:

□ Education Minister Pat McGee, Saanich school board chairman R. Byrnay Parrott and other officials of the schools system decry the reinstatement of a teacher after a "pot" charge, all on grounds of the grave importance of the teaching vocation due to their all-important role in influencing society's children and the moulding of both their individual lives and the entire future generation.

□ A release by Revenue Canada showing average annual income for doctors, lawyers, notaries, dentists, engineers, and architects all exceeding $40,000.

□ B.C.'s largest school district decides to "close the door to severely handicapped children" due to costs.

□ The president of the school trustees association (and backed by local school board chairman) now decry the notion of the teaching body asking for a 10 per cent increase over the present average annual teaching salary of $20,000 (i.e. less than half those above-mentioned).

Surely, the most telling point is the apparent deafening public silence in response to the second of the three foregoing items.

Somewhat, somewhere here there seems to be a suggestion of a mockery in all these expressions of the value and importance of "our children" and their healthy development. — G. C. D'Arcy, 1321 Vimy Avenue.

Round the May Pole

A semblance of sanity and control of Canada's "labor farce" will only return when civil service and essential industry strikes are outlawed. The electorate can begin by voting out of office gutless politicians at all government levels who have yet to realize that only a small percentage of voters are union members, aquiescent school boards and by demanding the resignation of Crown corporation directors. They have continually given in to unrealistic union demands at the expense of the taxpayer.

Nor are we ever informed of the millions of dollars that fringe benefits cost but are only given (usually by the union leader) the lowest financial figure, which is the hourly wage raise.

Two disgraceful aspects of the Canadian labor scene are:

□ Ministers of labor with spaghetti backbones. Federally, we recently had jittery John Munro; provincially we have weak Williams who brought in an essential services act that has more holes in it than a golf course, this enabling him to continue to run and hide whenever the crunch is on. If other provinces have the same calibre of labor minister, they too are in trouble.

□ The media have not informed the general public of their rights in the steps that can be taken to stop the endless negotiations, conciliation, arbitration and bargaining dances around the labor May pole. — Maggi Lynn, 548 Niagara Street.

PEOPLE OF THE LAKE: From Four Legs to Two

By RICHARD E. LEAKEY and ROGER LEWIN

We have long known that humans are descended from the forest ape. But famed anthropologist Richard Leakey is the first to solve the puzzle of how and when man escaped the jungle and evolved the physical shape and intellect we hold today. This fascinating story which spans eight million years is revealed in this second of a seven-part series from the book People of the Lake: Mankind and Its Beginnings.

The behavior of our ancestors was neither a primitive form of our own, nor was it just that of a sophisticated ape; it was a special adaptation of its own, and it is this that we are trying to construct. Bones and stones by themselves are boring; it's what they mean that sets our minds racing.

A few products of behavior do remain with us, of course: stone tools, shadowy features of ancient living sites, bones of animals that may have been included on a prehistoric menu, a fragment of sharpened ochre perhaps; and, quite late in the fossil record, signs of true awareness when our ancestors started to bury their dead. The list is long, but it does scant justice to a complex social organization which, though not fully human, was certainly not simply animal.

The construction job is far from easy.

Fanciful

The human mind has shown itself to be particularly fertile for generating notions about the nature of mankind, but only when those notions are subject to the scrutiny of different scientific disciplines can the more fanciful theories be weeded out. In learning about hominid history we have to be imaginative, but not fanciful.

Twenty million years ago, before the Rift Valley was more than distant subterranean rumblings, the African forest was the home of the ape. This was the age of the ape. These apes, one of which was eventually to give rise to the hominid family, were at the time the last word in the evolution of the primate order, the ecological order to which we belong, accompanied by apes, monkeys and small nimble prosimians.

The primate — the most advanced order of mammals — was born around 70 million years ago, at about the time of the demise of the amazing dinosaurs.

For the next 30 million years the primate order proliferated, producing scores of tree-living, insect-eating, small nocturnal animals. Their predation upon insects while suspended high on narrow treacherous twigs equipped them with grasping fingers tipped with nails in place of clumsy paws with claws, and with front-facing rather than sideways-looking eyes.

Throughout this time new primate species were getting bigger, something that frequently happens when a family is expanding in a lush evolutionary environment. Many of them switched their activities from night to light; they became diurnal rather than nocturnal. And because of the enormous practical advantages of seeing in color rather than monochrome, some of the diurnal prosimians eventually evolved the apparatus for appreciating the colored world around them.

So, even at this stage in our heritage, some 40 million years ago, apparatus that is so important to us as human beings now — grasping hands, stereoscopic vision, and the gift of seeing in color — had already emerged. The real evolutionary secret of humanity has always been to keep its equipment simple and adaptable, not to become specialized into a biological deadend.

Life aloft

Just when the prosimians seemed settled as a highly successful group of tree-dwellers, they gave issue to the monkeys, who promptly ousted their ancestors and dominated daytime life aloft. But the monkeys' ascendancy was not to last long, for about 30 million years ago came the apes, progeny of the monkey stock. Bigger than monkeys, the many different types of apes that evolved exploited a whole range of ecological opportunities, some learning the trick of hanging suspended by three limbs from branches, plucking otherwise inaccessible fruit with the fourth.

Like the diminutive prosimians and the agile monkeys before them, the Miocene apes thrived and proliferated, but the ones in which we are most interested are the so-called woodland apes. Here we will talk about just the apelike creature that lived around 15 million years ago — the Ramapithecus. This small creature (perhaps close to three feet tall) is currently favored as the first true hominid.

Now, if we are absolutely honest, we have to admit that we know nothing about Ramapithecus; we don't know what it looked like; we don't know what it did; and, naturally, we don't know how it did it. But with the aid of jaw and tooth fragments and one or two bits and pieces from arms and legs, all of which represent a couple of dozen individuals, we can make some guesses, more or less inspired.

First, the facts. The group of animals we call Ramapithecus were small, probably no bigger than three feet, and, judging by the kind of environments where their bones became fossilized, they were never far from trees. Rather than romping around in dense forest, it looks as though Ramapithecus preferred forest fringes and woodland. This little apelike animal was obviously well adapted to the ecological conditions of the time.

How does Ramapithecus compare with the modern apes? Its incisors are small; its molars are big and flattened with wear; its canines are small; and its jaw is V-shaped rather than rectangular; moreover, the lower jawbone is strikingly robust. Most of these features are unmistakable signs of an animal which feeds on something tough that demands rigorous grinding. And, from marks on some specimens of teeth and the general architecture of the lower jaw, we know that when Ramapithecus sat chewing in the wooded Miocene landscape, its jawbone moved from side to side, just as every self-respecting human jaw does today.

A possible sequence for the early stages in the emergence of cultural humanity from a forest ape is this: First, between 15 million and 12 million years ago, changes in the environment opened up a new ecological niche for a woodland animal that could survive on tough food; second, somewhere between three and 12 million years ago, possibly around eight, there were important advantages in being able to walk around on two rather than four legs; these initial changes are then followed by more social and ecological adaptations, and the pace of evolution begins to warm up.

— Why did Ramapithecus

Opportunism is the hallmark of the higher primate; a particularly generous endowment of opportunism may have, in the proper biological context, encouraged Ramapithecus to leave the stress of the shrinking forests and to stake a claim elsewhere.

The poor creature may have been squeezed out of the home it had known for so long by the intense competition and been forced to scratch out a living (literally) in a new and relatively impoverished ecological niche. Whatever the reason for the move into the new habitat, Ramapithecus probably did not find itself overwhelmed by a superabundance of food. Instead, it must have spent much of its day searching for roots, seeds, stems, nuts, tough fruits, and insects, most of which had to be pulverized between efficient millstone-like teeth.

This kind of life-style is not unlike that now pursued by the hairy gelada baboons that live in the highland plateaus of Ethiopia. These animals spend their days shuffling along on their haunches, turning over stones in search of roots and insects. They, too, pulverize their food between flattened, millstone-like molars.

The most dramatic thing to have happened to Ramapithecus is that it learned how to walk upright. By standing and walking, Ramapithecus would have freed its hands wonderfully. It would have been able to carry things, to learn to throw accurately, to manipulate small objects with undreamed precision, and perhaps even to invent a language of hand gestures.

New stance

A whole new world is opened up when a primate learns to walk on two legs instead of four, and the evolutionary force propelling Ramapithecus into this unique position must have been pretty powerful because the new stance demands radical restructuring of the pelvis and leg anatomy.

That it happened we know. But why it should happen in the first place is a mystery because most of the advantages are apparent only when upright walking is very well advanced. The arguments about bipedalism, as it is called, can be slotted into one of two main categories: cultural and ecological, and so far neither is overwhelmingly convincing.

Tools are at the focus of one cultural argument. Some people suggest that the need to fashion tools is sufficient to demand that ancient Ramapithecus should be able to stand up. Ramapithecus stood up, that we know, but this particular line of reasoning doesn't. First of all, the earliest stone tools don't appear in the archaeological record until relatively late, around three million years, and these are extremely crude, certainly not the work of hands tuned to fine precision. In any case, our ancestors were fully accomplished bipedalists by this time and probably had been for several million years.

What of ecology? One suggestion has been that as the forests shrank Ramapithecus set himself up as a hunter on the open savanna, and as he was such a small fellow he got on better by standing on his hind legs to peer over the tall grass to spot the prey. This argument, too, is a non-starter. First of all, our ancestors did not adopt an avaricious taste for meat at this time; indeed the teeth tell us quite the opposite. Second, Ramapithecus developed his new way of walking while he was still making a living in the forest fringes, or at least in woodland.

One attractive notion is that walking on two legs allows the animal to cover a greater range more effectively. If Ramapithecus really did have to search high and wide for its food and had the wit to know what type of vegetation was ready to eat where and when, then it probably would have to exploit an unusually large home range. Walking on two legs would help, if it were cheaper than going around on four. But it probably isn't. Bipedalism appears to consume more energy per mile than quadrupedalism. So another simple theory is frustrated.

As a side issue to this main problem, it is intriguing to speculate on a possible link between the energetically expensive business of getting about on two legs and the origins of human "nakedness." Whether or not it was a principal cause of bipedalism, upright hominids almost certainly covered more ground as they developed a more ranging life-style. They probably carried things too, such as food and implements. All of this is a hot business under the tropical sun, and the problem of overheating would have been made worse by the extra energy having to be burned to fuel this new and expensive mode of locomotion. An efficient way of keeping cool would have been essential, hence the development of countless sweat glands and the dramatic shortening of body hair, both of which are very unapelike.

Baffled

Such a development would almost certainly have plunged our ancestors into a nakedness more biologically significant than the simple lack of long hair or clothes. Evolution's answer would have been an all-over blush of dark pigment cells giving the skin a protective brown color.

"We have to admit to being baffled about the origins of upright walking. Probably our thinking is being constrained by preconceived notions, but trying to make Ramapithecus fit into patterns we see around us today.

The Miocene primates are not just primitive versions of today's apes or of us. They had developed their own special adaptation, and this is something we really must keep in mind when we're peering into that fossil void trying to pick out some images of our ancestors' way of life.

Radwinter and Progress

RADWINTER, England — Cyril Bacon's bantam rooster announces the day in a strong tenor. The sound rides the early stillness down the old Roman road to Mabel Richardson's post office, across the brook to Mrs. Digby's pub, past the Mortimers' house and Mrs. Murray's store and on up the final elevation to the church.

Beyond the church, they must rely on some other rooster or listen for the bells. The church bells chime on the quarter hour and toll the hour. Their message is an affirmation of what they have been saying every 15 minutes for generations.

Yet history is assaulting Radwinter again, and the village is yielding — subtly if seen by the day but stunningly if seen from a generation's passing.

The villagers are anxious. They worry that Radwinter will become a different sort of place from the one they have known. They worry that the newcomers, the city people who are moving steadily into villages all over England, may not love the place as they and their old people have.

Radwinter has lost most of its original purpose and is searching for a new one.

The sun rises here at almost the same moment it rises over London, 50 miles south. But the day in the village is like no-day in the city.

By ROY REED
New York Times

At 7:10 a.m. Mabel Richardson's three postwomen continue the rooster's work, binding the village to its parts. Elsie Bacon pedals her mail bike through the southern roads to the Grange, formerly one of four manor houses in the feudal days of the parish.

Recalling the last, dying days of the old ways, Bacon's brother Gerald, 67, says: "People used to have to salute the rector. When we were children, the boys had to touch their caps to him and the girls had to curtsy. We were brought up like that."

The Rev. Edward Bullock was the last of the family that dominated Radwinter for nearly 200 years. He died in 1925. The Bullocks restored and enlarged the 13th-century church, rebuilt two-thirds of the village's cottages after a fire in 1874, gave the village its parish hall and its first reading room and provided the first low-cost medical care.

The Bullocks were not only the rectors but also the chief landowners. If a farm worker refused to salute or showed any other sign of insolence, he might be dismissed.

Radwinter once provided everything its people needed.

But when tractors replaced the plow horses and mules after the Second World War, they also replaced the harnessmakers, the saddlemakers and the blacksmiths. Cars replaced feet, and people started shopping in the town of Saffron Walden, five miles west. Machines replaced farm workers, and the workers, shaken but sometimes grateful, found more comfortable jobs in the town.

The villagers wonder what will happen to the few pieces of local work still done by local people.

There are other worries. It disturbs the villagers that church no longer seems important here or anywhere else in England.

Most of all it disturbs them that new people are moving in so relentlessly, people who, pleasant neighbors though they are, have not yet proved their loyalty and who follow interests far beyond the village.

Many of the best houses are being taken by outsiders, commuters and retired city people.

There is probably more room for optimism than some admit. Radwinter, unlike many English villages similarly situated, is at least holding its own in population.

Education Mix Sparks Debate

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Canadian students are receiving the wrong type of education to make them an economic asset to the country, speakers told a management research conference at Wilfrid Laurier University during the weekend.

Dr. James Gilmore of the Science Council of Canada said the country's industrial problems are a result of a lack of the technological education needed to make Canadians innovators in such specialized industries as nuclear energy production.

He said the country must stop relying on technology imported through Canadian subsidiaries of international corporations and encourage development of high-technology industries within the country.

A business professor from Ryerson Polytechnical Institute in Toronto disagreed, however, saying that too much specialized education is making suitable workers unavailable to small businesses.

"We as educators have failed to train our students in the skills which are most needed by the public," said Raymond J. Sherk, director of the Canadian Federation of Independent Businesses.

"We have been turning out technical specialists — people who know more about less and less — rather than general ones."

Dr. George McClure, Nova Scotia's deputy minister of development, was optimistic about the world economy. He said the rate of increasing production is enough to provide better standards of living and higher incomes internationally.

Cultural Stand Knocked

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians must shed their attitude of cultural superiority, says Norman Cafik, federal minister of state for multiculturalism.

Speaking at a weekend conference on the role of East Indians in Canada, Cafik said, "We are bilingual for communicative and governmental purposes, but we reject the concept of biculturalism."

He said the federal government's 1971 multiculturalism policy was not only a positive declaration, but also a rejection of the bicultural view. Stronger laws will not alleviate racial problems in Canada, the minister said.

"Multiculturalism will survive only if it is rooted in the common agreement of the people."

He told Canadians of East Indian origin in the audience to take their concern for human rights to the Canadian public.

Cafik presented a $7,000 cheque from the federal government to help defray cost of the conference, the third annual meeting of the National Association of Canadians of Origins in India (NACOI), founded in 1976.

Year of Maestros Starts Well

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

The Year of the Maestros got off to an impressive start Sunday as Victoria Symphony Orchestra's first guest conductor-candidate, mounted the podium to introduce the 38th season.

For many in the large audience the occasion was also an introduction to the beautiful new UVic concert hall, the symphony's October concert having been transferred there while renovations proceed at the Royal Theatre.

If all candidates for the post of resident conductor of the Victoria Symphony turn out to be of similar calibre to Christopher Adey and if the quality of the orchestra's performance at this first concert pair is any indication of what we can expect during the next few months, symphony audiences are in for an exceptionally fine season.

At this point there is the added visual satisfaction of being able to see all the orchestra during the performance from most seats in the University Centre auditorium, while at the same time hearing it with unaccustomed clarity. (However, complaints of "dryness" of sound heard after the UVic inaugural concert from people seated in the balcony were repeated by Sunday's audience.)

Because of problems caused in part by the recent U.S. postal strike, there are program changes — Maestro Adey had to substitute the Berlioz-Roman Carnival Overture for his choice of the Johann Strauss Waldmeister, and guest artist, soprano Anna Moffo, sang three instead of four arias, orchestral parts for the scene from Il Trovatore not having arrived. Moffo, Adey and the orchestra are prepared with encore material, however, and on Sunday the choice was the waltz song Villa from The Merry Widow.

Basically the orchestra lives up to its new professional designation; it is without doubt an ensemble capable of providing fine sound, technical security, precision and an interpretive — possibly even a definitive performance — according to the vision and demands of the conductor.

Christopher Adey at 35 is an experienced conductor and violinist. His years of association with good orchestras in Britain loom behind an authoritative and lucid style on the podium. In performing the Roman Carnival he generates excitement and enormous vitality, combined with a discipline and clarity the like of which has seldom been heard from the orchestra in past seasons.

It is also a pleasure to mark the precision and well realized musical detail present in the Mozart Haffner, Symphony No. 35. This is polished, secure, beautifully phrased and reflects an obviously precise and in-depth rehearsal technique on Adey's part. The fact that it could also have been of a lighter, more ebullient consistency is something that is most likely attributable to the need for a little more time for the ensemble to mellow and adjust within itself.

The guest artist, charming of manner and appearance, has a lovely top to her operatic soprano; clear, rounded and pure tone floats in silky-smooth phrases throughout the higher registers but from the middle of the voice down there is little resonance, and pianissimos tend to disappear altogether. Adey did his best, listening to her intently and as far as possible keeping the orchestra at a compatible level, but it must be remembered that the orchestral role in opera is a dynamic one, brass can only be muffled down so much and an operatic singer should be expert at gauging the amount and kind of tone needed at various points.

Woman Priest's Ordination Fought

MONTREAL (CP) — Lettie James was ordained a priest of the Anglican Church of Canada Sunday amid a formal protest from 28 Anglican clergymen and a walkout of 50 lay persons.

Rev. James, 53, the first woman priest in the diocese of Montreal, was ordained along with Phillip Carr-Harris, 24, by Bishop Reginald Hollis before 500 people in Christ Church Cathedral.

"I'm bursting with joy," she said following the ceremony.

But her ordination was opposed by Father Peter Hadden of a local parish who told the emotionally-charged assembly he was against the ordination of women on Scriptural grounds.

Hadden said the Anglican church was ordaining women without regard for the views of other members of the Catholic tradition, such as the various orthodox churches and the Roman Catholic Church, which refuse to ordain women.

When Bishop Hollis responded he would proceed despite the protest, Hadden left the church followed by 50 of his supporters. The 26 clergy who signed the protest represent about a third of the clergy in the diocese.

Hadden said the protest wasn't meant as anything personal.

"I met with her at her home on Saturday and discussed the situation and we hugged as I left."

Haligonians Seethe

The Halifax protection league is a mighty force in Victoria, chamber of commerce manager Brian Small discovered during the weekend.

"The phone just keeps ringing. I didn't realize there were so many people from Halifax living in Victoria."

The callers — all of them mad — were responding to Small's comment Friday that Halifax is "an old, tired, grubby, unattractive city" and returning home to Victoria is like going from Hell to Paradise.

"I should have made it clear that I was not including all of Halifax, just a small part. And I should have said: as different as night and day or something like that. I really apologize to Halifax and to anyone who came from there."

Small was in Nova Scotia for eight days to attend a convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

He has not yet heard from Halifax civic officials but he expects to as soon as the Times' clipping is delivered.

But what he has heard from Haligonians residing in Victoria is more than enough.

"Some people told me they are homesick for Halifax and they don't like Victoria at all. Others told me about places in Halifax I should have visited; historical monuments and things like that."

1,000 Flee Mississauga Refinery Fire

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — More than 1,000 residents were forced to flee their homes early today after a tank holding two million gallons of fuel oil caught fire at a Texaco Canada Ltd. oil refinery, officials said.

As flames and clouds of black smoke filled the area in this city just west of Toronto, nearby residents ran to their cars to drive to safety and police cordoned off a three-kilometre area.

Fire officials said extra foam-making machines had been brought in in an attempt to stop the fire, which started at 2 a.m., from spreading to other nearby tanks.

As firefighters fought to contain the blaze, residents were allowed to return to homes several hours after the fire started but they were removed a second time when firefighters reported a danger of a second tank catching fire.

Earlier, it had been thought that a second tank had started to blaze but officials said the smoke and shooting flames had confused onlookers.

Fire officials said they thought they had gained an upper hand in controlling the blaze above ground although it continued to rage underground in pipes and lines connecting the fuel storage tanks.

Northern B.C. Blacked Out

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The cause of a power black-out that hit northern British Columbia Saturday night has been traced to work being done by B.C. Hydro crews who were installing new equipment at a substation near here, a Hydro spokesman said Sunday.

He said the while the work was being carried out, a fault developed that put the entire substation out of order.

Police said the fire apparently started in a ruptured gasoline main.

Texaco officials said a fire of such size could not be controlled and it could take two days to burn itself out.

Meanwhile, some residents waited in a nearby library and an arena, many dressed only in their nightclothes.

Texaco opened the company's community centre and conference rooms for others.

Motor traffic in the area was slowed as black smoke continued to billow from the refinery in the southern part of this city of about 285,000.

The main line used by CNR and CP Rail, about 15 kilometres from the fire site, was closed.

It was early morning when residents were alerted to the fire in this area which includes luxury homes in the $200,000 range.

Only Nine More Miles To End of the Trail

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Nine more miles to go and restoration of one of the most spectacular and adventurous trails in North America will be completed.

But completion of the bush work along the historic West Coast trail won't take place until next summer.

A Canada Park's crew has broken camp at Camper Bay, nine miles from Port Renfrew, after installing the last major bridge along the rugged 45-mile trail.

"We'll be back next summer to brush out the remainder of the trail and to install three small structures," said Dick Cooper, general works manager for Pacific Rim National Park.

A Lot of Sweat and Tears

"There's been a lot of sweat and tears in restoring this trail," he added. "I was on it from the start. But I've grown attached to it. I feel part of it."

Since the park's summer restoration project began in July, 1962, trail builders have constructed more than 100 structures, mostly wooden, over creeks, bogs and natural obstacles. This includes a 452-foot cable car bridge across the Walbran River—believed to be the longest of its type in North America.

It's a spectacular ride for hikers—dangling above the river as they pull themselves across.

There are actually eight other major bridges—six cable crossing bridges and three suspension bridges over rivers.

A new boardwalk has also been constructed through a three-quarter-mile bog abounding in dwarf conifers, sweet smelling Rein orchids, pink kalmias and insect eating sundews. The area was formerly known by Indians as the Land of the Spirit children.

Boards originally laid through the bog disappeared long ago and hikers sank in mire and muck.

The restoration program owes much to Bruce Payne, a pilot for Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd. who has been involved in the project since its inception.

From the air, Payne became an expert in trail building in his own way. Flying his helicopter down chasms and between steep river banks, he has delivered materials dangling from a 200-foot line or more, directly on construction sites.

He has saved the trail-builders many hours of labor.

The trail has proved a big success since it was proposed for inclusion in Pacific Rim National Park. There are no official figures, but it is estimated in the last six years more than 40,000 people have walked a part or the entire length of coastal pathway.

The last two years has also seen a growing number of foreign backpackers on the trail, mainly from Germany, France, Italy, Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

Your Biggest Attraction

"This is what we expect to see when we come to Vancouver Island," said an American couple. "This is your biggest attraction."

Has the trail been made too easy for walkers? Some of the more experienced hikers think so, but this is not the opinion of the majority of trail users, including park wardens.

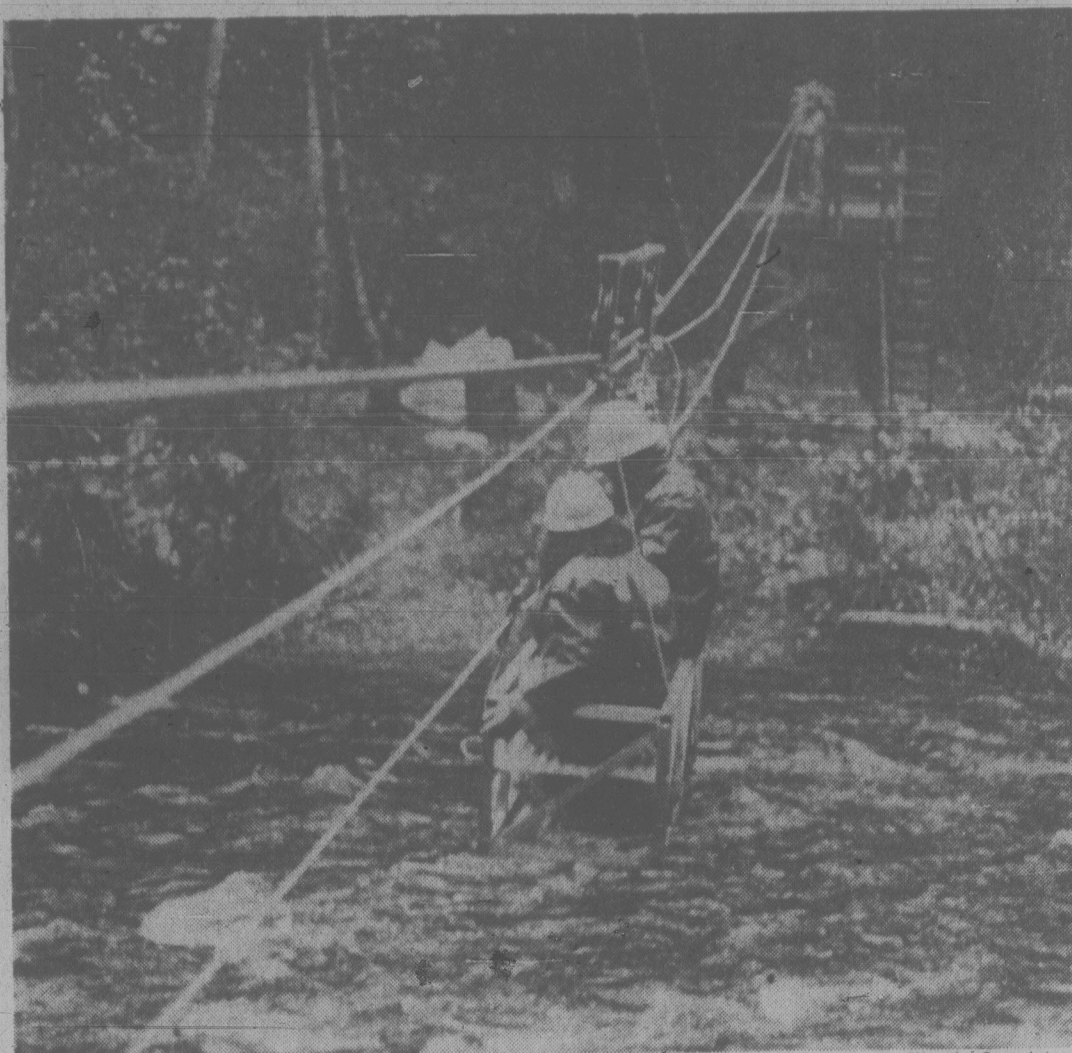

In the first place the trail, developed to help shipwrecked mariners, originally had bridges, boardwalks and shelters. It was well maintained.

But even though it is restored, it seems to be difficult enough for the majority of Canadians.

As warden Ian Pengelly put it: "Backpacking is a recent phenomena and most Canadians are just learning the art of trail walking."

"Some who walk the trail are physically unfit," he added. "They strain tendons or sprain ankles. Some don't even know how to light a fire."

"On the other hand, I run across family groups on the Riders pull themselves along 452-foot cable car bridge across Walbran River trail who are mentally prepared for the hike," he said. "They can cope with minor problems and enjoy the experience. It would be unfair to make it more difficult for them."

So far the trail has claimed two lives, a man and woman. In both cases the accidents could have been avoided if the hikers had kept to the trail instead of walking in hazardous areas.

Boom in Bonds

Sales Could Hit $7 Billion

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The new issue of Canada Savings Bonds on sale today will be the largest in Canadian history if local investment dealer forecasts prove correct.

John Bassett, manager of Midland Doherty, says he can see $5 to $7 billion worth of bonds being sold nationally, by far the biggest subscription ever.

By comparison Canadians tucked away a tidy $2.7 billion in the bonds last year.

Bassett says there are some good reasons to expect a flood in bond buying.

Two very large bond issues come due this fall and will dump more than $4.5 billion onto the money market.

In addition the rate of interest offered in the current series—an average of 8.9 per cent over a seven-year period—is more than a full per cent higher than last year's and presents an attractive option for investors.

William Graham of A.E. Ames agrees. "We're getting all sorts of orders for them (bonds), much more than last year," he says.

Graham says besides better rates, the maximum allowable purchases have been increased from $15,000 to $30,000 and there's no limit on the amount persons with maturing bonds can roll over into the current issue.

Canada Savings Bonds have always been and will continue to be an excellent savings device, Bassett says.

But uncertainty over interest rates generally is causing some experts to have second thoughts on the matter.

Robert Cherneff, a professor of economics at the University of Victoria, is more cautious.

He speculates the government is now pursuing a policy of keeping interest rates down until the bond issue is placed.

And when that happens, look out, he warns.

"If inflation is running at nine per cent and the interest is nine per cent then the return on investment is zero," he says.

"Interests would have to be 10 or 11 per cent to yield a return on investment."

The big question is the length of time it takes to place the bond issue. Historically issues have been open-ended. When the government gets the amount it wants, it simply cuts the sales off. The trouble is no one knows how much the government is hoping to raise.

In light of the federal deficit, now estimated at $12 billion this year, it is apparent the government will need all it can get and more.

Cherneff suggests if the government isn't able to sell the issue swiftly there could be problems.

"The last thing it wants is to have to raise the interest rate before the issue is placed," he says.

If that happens the government will have to attach a bonus to the bond issue as was the case a few years ago. The net effect: more costly money for the government and the taxpayers.

Cherneff believes the pressures on the government are so great it will have to increase the interest rate and for that reason he considers the savings bonds in that respect only a poor investment.

Bassett disagrees.

"It's a false assumption the rate will go up. It's already gone up four times this year."

But Bassett adds anything could happen. The financial situation in which the country finds itself is an enigma that defies explanation, he says.

He points out that while short-term interest rates are going up, long-term rates are practically static. In other words the demand for short-term loans is high, but there's still plenty of money around for long term loans such as mortgages.

Bassett says the problems are the result of the federal government's fiscal policies. "The government's been spending more than it's been receiving in revenues. That can only go on for so long. I think it's finally caught up to them."

He says the cumulative debt is now $55 billion, made up of $12 billion in treasury bills, $17.5 billion in Canada Savings Bonds and $25 billion in other government bonds outstanding.

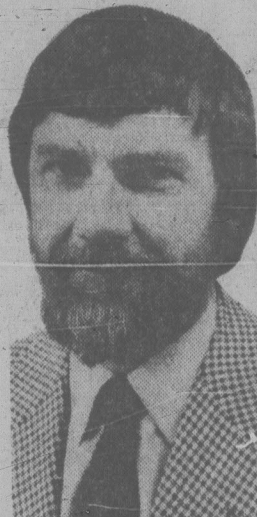

Cherneff says this year's deficit is equal to the entire federal budget of only eight or nine years ago.

He says the government has failed to curb inflation largely because it hasn't tackled the principle causes of inflation, soaring food and shelter costs.

Touchy Topics

Controversial topics in B.C. education, including declining enrolment, provincial assessment and the evaluation of schools, will be aired at the annual conference of the British Columbia Principals and Vice-Principals Association at the Empress Hotel Oct. 25-28.

Entitled Countdown X, the conference will include policy statements from the ministry of education, the B.C. School Trustees Association, the B.C. Teachers Federation and the B.C. Principals and Vice-Principals Association. Its theme is "Issues and answers... from your school to the ministry and back."

MIKA rebuked by Hutcheson

Library Back-Biting Scored by Chairman

Greater Victoria Library Board chairman Gordon Hutcheson today rebuked Saanich Ald. John Mika for making what he claims are incorrect, negative statements about the conclusion of the deal for a new central library.

He said board members who have worked hard over the last 18 months to acquire new premises for the library in the provincial government building on Broughton will find Mika's comments "offensive."

Mika had earlier criticized Hutcheson and Victoria Ald.

Murray Glazier for taking the credit for the successful completion of the negotiations with B.C. Building Corporation.

The agreement now includes an option allowing the four core municipalities to purchase space in the provincial building and Mika said Esquimalt Ald. Larry Mann should take credit for this.

He said Hutcheson and Glazier had reviled Mann and even demanded his resignation for insisting on a strata title ownership.

Hutcheson said emphatically today there had never been any suggestion that Mann should resign and termed Mika's comment as wrong and unwarranted.

"Instead, Ald. Mann was strongly encouraged to assist in obtaining a strata title option after his proposal was passed at a recent Esquimalt meeting," Hutcheson said.

"His assistance in this final phase (of the negotiations with BCBC) has been appreciated."

Hutcheson appealed for an end to "negative back-biting" and urged all to co-operate in the goal of providing a new, more spacious library.

BARGAINS BOOST BOOZE SALES

Government liquor stores in Victoria recorded slightly better than average sales Saturday as bargain hunters tried to beat price increases to more than 1,000 brands of liquor and wines.

Brands and French wines were especially sought out, but one liquor board employee put it this way: "Some people will buy anything to save a nickel."

Most stores had heavier-than-usual pressure but one employee said that could be because it was a pay weekend for many people.

"We had maybe 4,000 or 5,000 more people in-but business is usually heavier in the middle of the month and at the end when the pay cheques are out."

At the downtown Yates St. store, however, liquor board staff said a 20 per cent surge in the number of customers was largely due to the price hikes that took effect today.

"We had a stampede of sorts, especially on import wines," said the employee.

Vancouver booze buyers were a little more eager to beat the price jump and many stores reported increased sales ranging from 140 per cent to more than 200 per cent over usual Saturday levels.

"It was just like Christmas Eve here," said Gary Coop, an employee at a downtown store. "We were just wiped out."

The largest price increases were in French white burgundies. A bottle of Meursault de Ropiteau white burgundy, which was listed at $7.85 last week, now will sell for $15.45.

French red wines also increased substantially with Chateau Pontet Canet, a French red Bordeaux, jumping $5.65 a bottle to $16.60.

The price increases were caused by the weakened Canadian dollar, higher freight charges and a general increase in demand for wines, said John Usher, a spokesman for the Liquor Distribution Branch.

The price of Canadian and American beer has not changed but most spirits, such as scotch, gin and Canadian rum have been raised between five and 10 cents, with some brands increasing as much as 70 cents.

The price changes for Canadian wines range from a 90-cent decrease to a 15-cent increase.

Out of the Saltchuck, a Horned Head

OCCASIONALLY THE sea that laps our doorstep delivers a surprise. A couple of weeks ago we were setting out in our boat from the landing when movement at the edge of the kelp fringe caught my eye.

I looked, then pointed. A heavily-antlered head cruised at the apex of a lazy wake.

It was a startling sight. Reconstructing the chain of events that caused a great blacktail buck to be swimming off the kelp bed, I suspect that the old fellow had slipped down to the beach for a lick of salt. Then dogs got wind of him, set up a vicious pursuit, and eventually forced him to take to the water.

In any case, he was swimming powerfully on a course parallel to the shore, and seemed in no distress.

The temptation when confronted by a wild creature in a predicament is to rush to the rescue. It is this commendable impulse to help that causes people to deliver to the harried Fish and Wildlife branch each year, any number of fawns found couched by the roadside. If they were only left alone, the chances are that the mother would return in due time to her young and all would be well.

The result: "orphan" deer to grow up as wards of a department that can get along handsomely without them... and with the further guarantee that as they grow, they will become profound and sometimes even dangerous nuisances.

Nine times out of 10, it's best to let nature's children severely alone.

Even so, I was tempted for a moment to try to lend the buck a hand. Get a line around his neck, steer him ashore, and with an eye out for dogs, shoo him back into the woods.

But reason prevailed. We left him to his swim. When we last glimpsed that royal head, it was slanting toward shore, where woods tongued out to the saltchuck.

A week or so later, however, the one-in-10 time overtook us.

Vance, a young man from up the road, was trying to recover some domestic geese—strong-winged exotics that have taken to haunting the bay shoreline. He glimpsed movement between a couple of driftlogs, looked down, and found a pair of bulging brown eyes gazing up at him.

A baby harbor seal, a little creature only a few days old, lay sheltered between the logs.

Vance reached down to it. At once the seal darted out its head and snapped at his hand. But its fear was short-lived. Soon it was letting Vance stroke it without attempting to bite him.

Presently Vance picked it up in his arms and carried it down to the water. He set it in the shallows. At once, it floundered ashore and began to flap its way up the beach. So Vance brought it along to our place.

What had happened to remove it so drastically from its element? We could only guess. Perhaps its mother had been shot. There had been a quickie blow the previous day: maybe in the rough weather it had become separated from its mother. Whichever, it was obviously abandoned. We scanned the inshore waters for a long time, but failed to see a sleek mother-seal head break water.

The flipperling refused skim milk. We promoted a baby-bottle and Win warmed rich canned milk. It took a little of that... enough to satisfy us that it wouldn't starve.

When a federal fisheries officer arrived to take the baby in charge, it was lolling in salt water in our plastic fish-box, accepting the attentions of several adults and children with every evidence of enjoyment.

Vance named the seal "Snapper," and with mild regret, we watched it set out on a journey which would end in one of Victoria's marinelands. In that instance, I think human intercession was justified. It's most unlikely that, even if she were able, the mother would have returned for her pup.

All of which once more impresses on me the fact that here we live between two wildernesses.

On the one hand, the woods which remain the home of bear and cougar and deer. And on the other, untamed and untameable, the sea.

Ailing Reutemann Roars to Victory

Times News Services

Flu-stricken Carlos Reutemann of Argentina roared out to a big early lead then coasted home to an easy victory Sunday in the Grand Prix of the United States at Watkins Glen, N.Y., while Mario Andretti was felled by a blown engine in his Lotus 79 in a bid to become the first winner of his country's Grand Prix.

"My only problem today was with myself," said the exhausted Reutemann. "I was not physically strong. It was very difficult for me to concentrate."

Reutemann, who also won the Grand Prix West at Long Beach, Calif., earlier this year for a sweep of the two American Formula 1 events, slowed his Ferrari to a crawl and finished 19.7 seconds ahead of Australian Alan Jones, in a Williams.

It may have been one of Reutemann's last looks at the Ferrari organization. He is leaving, with some regret, at the end of the season to become Andretti's Lotus teammate.

Andretti, who demolished his front-line Lotus in a morning warmup session, was forced to start the event in a car qualified by his teammate, Jean Pierre Jarier. The car was troubled with brake and handling problems from the start and finally erupted an engine on only the 27th of 59 laps while Andretti clung to fourth place.

Reutemann's Ferrari teammate, Canadian rookie Gilles Villeneuve of Berthier, Que., grabbed second place on the second lap and held it until he lost his engine midway in the race.

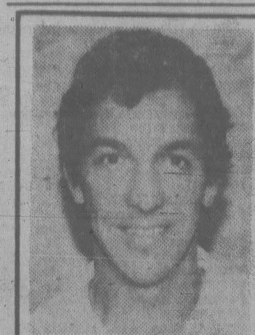

Third-place Jody Scheckter of South Africa, driving a Wolf-Ford for Montreal industrialist Walter Wolf, sputtered home on six or seven cylinders for third place, but had enough steam to pass Jean Pierre Jabouille of France, in a Renault, for a position just a few laps from the finish. Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil, in a Copersucar, was fifth and Frenchman Patrick Tambay's McLaren finished sixth.

PEARANCE IN ENGLAND for the Indy-type cars. Rick Mears of Ventura, Calif., was second and Tom Sneva of Spokane finished third. Cale Yarborough, who was down by as much as three laps, came back to snatch the lead from Darrell Waltrip in the final 20 laps to win the $81,915 Wilkes 400 stock car race in North Carolina. Yarborough went into the lead on lap 382, when Waltrip took his Chevrolet into the pits to get two new tires. Bobby Allison was third and Richard Petty finished fourth. Belgian Jacky Ickx escaped injury when the rear of his Ford

Falcon burst into flames during Australia's annual 1,000-kilometres touring car motor race at Mount Panorama, 230 kilometres west of Sydney. A member of the Ickx crew was severely burned in the accident during a fuel stop. The race was won by Australian Peter Brock and his New Zealand co-driver, Jim Richards. At Nicosia, Cyprus, Britain's Roger Clark and co-driver Jim Porter won the gruelling 1,488-kilometre (930-mile) Cyprus rally, finishing ahead of Cypriot Christos Kirmitsis.

VICTORIANS DOMINATE DRIVERS' CHALLENGE SERIES

Race to Smith, Series to Haslam

Roy Smith won the final International Drivers' Challenge series race for open super-Stocks Sunday at Evergreen Speedway in Munroe, Wash., to make it a one-two finish over-all for Victoria drivers.

Roy Haslam, who finished third behind Neil Newberry of Wenatchee, Wash., had already clinched the over-all crown going into the race. He collected a 1978 Ford Pinto for his series victory while Smith, who timed in at 23.37 seconds to knock two seconds off the Evergreen track record, won a trip for four to Hawaii as runner-up.

Another Victorian, Joe Musfelt, placed fourth in the final 150-lap feature and managed to finish sixth over-all.

Ron Eaton of Tacoma, Don Dowdy of Yakima and Bob Fox of Bremerton were third through fifth in the series.

After a slow start because of accidents in the feature race, Smith took over the lead on the 20th lap and remained in front until the 51st with Haslam running second and Eaton third. Dowdy was knocked out of contention but escaped uninjured when his vehicle blew up on the 30 lap.

On the 51st lap, somebody in the stands had a heart attack and the race had to be stopped in order to get the ambulance out of the infield.

Both Smith and Haslam decided to pit during the red flag and were placed at the back of the field on the restart.

As a consequence, Eaton took over the lead and held out until the 145th circuit when his engine blew and Smith regained the lead.

Meanwhile, at Western Speedway on Saturday, Jim Caudwell ran into some bad luck.

SUPER STOCKS
Feature (100 laps): Orton Ker, Bill Smith, Larry Pollard, Dave Johnson, Ernie West.

Caudwell, who was leading the super-stock standings going into the final event of the season, set fast time of the night before 2,300 fans and was leading the 100-lap feature when disaster struck.

On lap 85, his vehicle blew a tire. Caudwell stuck it out for another five laps but had to pit finally and relinquish the lead to Orton Ker, who stayed in front to win the double-points race.

The victory means Ker might have taken the points championship, although calculations are not yet complete.

Bill Smith finished second and Larry Pollard was third.

Caudwell had 1,055 points going into the race, Pollard was second with 982 and Ker third with 948. Pollard finished the race with a smoking car and managed to get out uninjured when it burst into flames. It took fire crews 10 minutes to extinguish the fire.

Al Miller won the stock car 100-lap feature while Gordie Stone, who had clinched the points title, was second.

Stockton in Final

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tenth-seeded Dick Stockton defeated Pat Dupre 6-3, 6-7, 7-5 Sunday night in the semi-finals of a $175,000 tennis tournament.

Stockton will meet John McEnroe in tonight's final. McEnroe beat Eddie Dibbs earlier Sunday 6-4, 6-7.

TRACK MEET DATES
EDMONTON (CP) — The 1979 Canadian indoor track and field championships will be held here Feb. 24 and 25.

Stockton breezed by the unseeded Dupre in the first set but Dupre took the second set in a tie-breaker before Stockton regained the serving power that had forced his opponent into errors during the opening set.

Carew Is 'No Nigger' On Griffith Plantation

Times News Services

An incensed Rod Carew vowed in Kansas City Sunday, to never again play baseball for Minnesota Twins and owner Calvin Griffith, saying he refused to be a "nigger on his plantation and play for a bigot."

Carew's tirade came after the Twins' game with Kansas City and after he and the rest of the team had learned of remarks by Griffith at a service club meeting in the small town of Waseca, Minn.

"I will not ever sign another contract with this organization," said Carew, who won his seventh American League batting title on his 33rd birthday. "I don't care how much money or how many options Calvin Griffith offers me. I definitely will not be back next year."

Griffith was casually asked at the Lion's Club meeting Thursday night why he had moved the old Washington Senators to Minnesota in 1961.

Before answering, Griffith was reported to have scanned the room and then said:

"I'll tell you why we came to Minnesota. It was when I found out you (Minnesota) only had 15,000 blacks here."

"Black people don't go to ball games, but they'll fill up a rassling ring and put up such a chant it'll scare you to death. It's unbelievable. We came here because you've got good, hard-working white people here."

Griffith later denied that the remarks were racist but Carew didn't see it that way.

"To have the audacity to look around the room and then to start talking about blacks; that's how much guts he's got," Carew said.

"I hope somebody gets wind of this and I hope they drag him down. He respects nobody and expects nobody to respect him."

Griffith was quoted in a copyrighted story by staff writer Joe Coleman in the Minneapolis Tribune as saying:

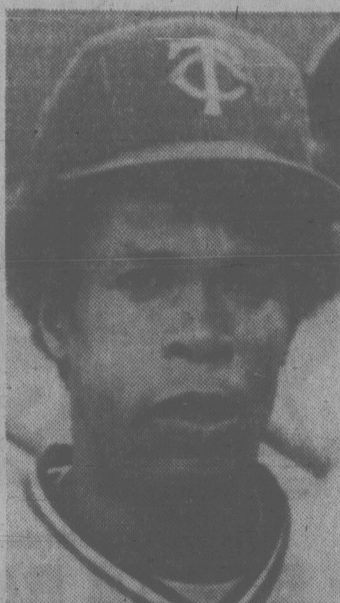

"Ballplayers should take advantage of free love rather than get married and have their performance suffer like catcher Butch Wynegar."

He decided to move to Minnesota when he found out the state had only 15,000 blacks, and:

—Slugging Rod Carew was a "damn fool" for signing a three-year contract at only $170,000 per year.

Many of the Twins players, who were in Kansas City for the season finale, refused to comment on the remarks.

But outfielder Dan Ford said he no longer wanted to play for the Twins and that the remarks would make it a "burden for people to put this uniform on."

ROD CAREW
"won't ever play for Twins again"

Griffith insisted that his comments were in jest and misunderstood.

Griffith said: "What the hell, racism is a thing of the past. Why do we have colored ballplayers on our club? They're the best ones. If you don't have them, you're not going to have a club."

Coleman also wrote that Griffith badmouthed his former manager, Billy Martin, modern players and the game of baseball in general.

"They all carry an attache case with a hair-dryer in it," said Griffith of the players. "You've got to have three seats on a plane for every two players so they can put their hi-fis and hair-dryers down."

Wynegar, who had a poor year, was married last winter and objected to Griffith's remarks. Griffith reportedly said Wynegar should have spent more time running around the outfield instead of around the bedroom.

On Carew, Griffith had this to say: "We all know damn well that he's worth a lot more than that ($170,000), but that's what his agent asked for so that's what he gets."

Griffith also was quoted as saying Martin was still a good friend, but that he could "charm the ---- off those three monkeys. You know, 'Listen to no evil, watch no evil and talk no evil.'"

Twins manager Gene Mauch refused to comment on the statements, saying "Any story that comes out on Saturday about something that happened on Thursday is suspect to me."

Red Sox Catch Yanks To Force Fenway Final

By The Associated Press

It all came down to one game today, winner take all, New York Yankees against Boston Red Sox in Boston's Fenway Park for the American League East title.

The Red Sox, who had led by 10 games in July and by 8½ as late as Aug. 21 before being overtaken by the Yankees' second-half surge, climbed back into a tie Sunday by blanking Toronto Blue Jays 5-0.

But they needed help, and they got it from Cleveland Indians, who clobbered the Yankees 9-2. New York only needed to win its game to take the division title outright, but couldn't do it.

"I just didn't have any pop," said Yankees' starter Catfish Hunter, knocked out in the second inning after being rocked for home runs by Andre Thornton and Gary Alexander. "I can't say what it was, I just didn't have any pop—that little extra that makes the fastball pop and the slider slide—even if it's just one mile an hour faster."

And so the Red Sox finally got the break they needed. Ever since Sept. 23, they had trailed New York by one game. But the Yankees had matched them win for win until Cleveland put an end to New York's six-game winning streak on Sunday.

"We wanted a shot and we got it," said Red Sox third baseman Butch Hobson. "Now it's up to us."

Today's playoff marks the sixth time in major league history—the last time being in 1963 and the first in 1946—that two teams finished in a tie for first place.

The five previous playoffs determined who would win a pennant while today's winner simply earns the right to meet Kansas City Royals in the best-of-five series for the AL crown opening Tuesday night in Kansas City.

Bobby Thompson and his dramatic ninth-inning three-run homer, the "shot heard 'round the world," off Ralph Branca is the most-remembered fact of baseball's playoffs. That occurred in 1951 between New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Giants, who trailed the Dodgers by 1½ games at one point in August, rallied to win 37 of their last 44 games and forced the three-game playoff with Brooklyn.

The Giants won the first game 3-1. The Dodgers took the second 10-0 and were leading 4-2 in the ninth inning of the third when Thompson connected to send the Giants to the Series, which they lost to the Yankees, 4-2.

New York's ace left-hander, Ron Guidry, 24-3, was scheduled to pitch against Boston's Mike Torrez, 16-12—both of them going on three days of rest.

Guidry had hurled two-hit shutouts in his last two outings against Boston, winning 7-0 on Sept. 9 and 4-0 on Sept. 13. Torrez, who starred for the Yankees last season before signing with Boston as a free agent, had snapped an eight-game losing streak with a 1-0 victory over Detroit on Thursday.

Luis Tiant, Boston's Mr. Clutch, allowed only a pair of singles in winning "the biggest game I've ever pitched." He struck out four and did not walk a batter.

Rick Burleson belted a two-run homer and Jim Rice slammed a solo shot, his 46th home run of the season, as Boston won its eighth in a row and 12th in the last 14 games.

The Indians, who had lost six in a row, pounded Hunter and Dick Tidrow for six runs in the first two innings.

The final day of the National League season was anticlimactic for most players. But for others, such as Gaylord Perry, George Foster, Dave Parker, Kent Tekulve, Omar Moreno and Ross Grimsley, the closing games had significance.

Perry, the 40-year-old graybeard of the San Diego staff, became only the third pitcher to strike out 3,000 batters, fanning 10 as the Padres defeated Los Angeles' NL West champions 4-3 in 11 innings Sunday.

Foster won the NL home run and runs batted in titles for the third consecutive year, smashing two homers—his 39th and 40th of the season, the second a two-run shot in the 14th inning, giving Cincinnati Reds a 10-8 victory over Atlanta Braves. Foster finished with 120 RBIs.

Parker, Pittsburgh's slugging outfielder, captured the league batting crown for the second straight year, with a .334 average, while two of his teammates, Tekulve and Moreno, set club records—Tekulve with his 31st save and Moreno with his 71st stolen base—as the Pirates downed Philadelphia's East Division champions 5-3.

And Grimsley became the NL's second 20-game winner—Perry was the first—pitching a five-hitter as Montreal Expos topped St. Louis Cardinals 3-1.

Cougar Scorers Nervous Against Spirited Wranglers

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Calgary Wranglers weren't pushovers, and it may be because starting at home may be a bit more difficult than people might suspect.

That was coach Jack Shupe's summation after Victoria Cougars opened their Western Major Junior Hockey League campaign Saturday with a 5-4 victory over Calgary at Memorial Arena.

"Overall, I thought the team played well," he said, "but for lack of finish. They should have had more goals."

"And the reason for that is starting at home. My players all seemed tight. They tried too hard and consequently flubbed chances that they ordinarily wouldn't miss."

Cougars out-shot the inexperienced Wranglers 38-31 and it is Calgary's credit that the club was able to force the issue to the wire. Smaller than the Cougars and with only four players with previous WHL experience, the Wranglers mixed plenty of spirit with some discipline into their skating and, despite the loss, pleased coach Doug Sauter.

"This is the tough division," said Sauter. "Any time you can hold a Western Division team to a one-goal margin on its own ice, you have to be pleased."

Holdover centre Gary Lupul sparked Victoria's attack with a four-point performance, including two goals. Gordie Robertson opened Victoria scoring and then neatly set up younger brother Torrie for what proved to be the game-winner in the third period.

Rookie Greg Adams scored Cougars' other goal while Kelly Kisio, former Victorian Gary Slezak, Blake Sullivan and Rocky Greenwood connected for Calgary.

A hard-hitting affair began an opening crowd of 2,632, the game was marred by one out-of-control fight. It obviously was precipitated by an incident late in the first period involving Gordie Robertson, the Cougar captain, and Calgary goaltender Mark Szysla.

They collided in a race for a loose puck and Robertson was penalized for charging.

Late in the second period, Buzz Gottschalk and Robertson became embroiled in a roughing incident near the Calgary goal and Szysla wasted no time in becoming involved.

After peace was restored, the referee dished out four game misconducts, two misconducts, two majors and three minors.

Sauter wasn't as pleased Sunday in Portland when Wranglers blew a 5-0 lead and settled for a 5-5 tie with the Winter Hawks. Hawks, outplayed by the Wranglers for two periods, scored all their goals in the final 11 minutes.

It wasn't a good night for the early scorers.

Edmonton Oil Kings scored the first three at home but dropped a 7-3 decision to Saskatoon Blades and in Lethbridge, the visiting Billings Bighorns popped in the first two but finally bowed 6-2 to the Broncos.

At Brandon, the Wheat Kings continued to demonstrate a highly-powered offense by belting Medicine Hat Tigers 8-2.

In a Saturday game at New Westminster, the defending champion Bruins needed a goal by John Ogrudnick, his fifth in two games, to edge Seattle Breakers 6-5.

To Packer Backers The Pack IS Back

By The Associated Press

Is the Pack really back? Coach Bart Starr, who was the quarterback when Green Bay terrorized the National Football League a decade ago, thinks it's too early to tell. But Packer backers prefer to look at the National Conference standings, which show their team with four wins in the first five games and sitting in first place.

"We haven't met a championship-calibre team yet, other than Oakland," said Starr, whose club destroyed Detroit 35-24 Sunday. "We haven't beaten anyone of repute, so we have to temper it."

But that's tough for Green Bay fans to do after Terrell Middleton ran for 148 yards, including a 76-yard touch-down, and David Whitehurst had two TD passes to Aundra Thompson in a 14-for-18 day that produced 230 yards.

"Just about every play we called worked," noted Whitehurst. Starr could appreciate that. He remembers when the same things happened to him almost every week.

Green Bay's defence also sacked Detroit's quarterbacks six times for 50 yards, with end Ezra Johnson in on four of the sacks.

If Starr was hesitant in his assessment of his team, Lion quarterback Greg Landry was not. "I'd say Green Bay is playing well enough to be challenging for a divisional championship," he said.

In Sunday's other games, New England rallied for a 28-23 victory over San Diego, Pittsburgh battered New York Jets 28-17, Miami downed St. Louis 24-10, Minnesota ripped Tampa Bay 24-7, Buffalo defeated Kansas City 28-17, Atlanta nipped New York Giants 23-20, Houston edged Cleveland 16-13, Los Angeles beat New Orleans 26-20, Philadelphia nipped Baltimore 17-14, San Francisco downed Cincinnati 28-12, Denver defeated Seattle 28-7 and Oakland whipped Chicago 25-19 in overtime.

Dallas plays at Washington tonight.

ago to Tampa Bay, beating the Bucs soundly on the passing of Fran Tarkenton, who completed 20 of 31 attempts for 208 yards.

"Two weeks ago, we were old and worn out ...," said Tarkenton. "Today we win ... I can't figure out what we did different from one week to the next."

UBC Clips UVic 1-0

EDMONTON — University of British Columbia edged Victoria's Vikings 1-0 in a brilliantly-played final Sunday to capture top honors in the annual University of Alberta women's field-hockey tournament.

Both B.C. teams were unbeaten in topping their respective divisions in the preliminary round-robin.

The Jenny John-coached Vikettes were impressive in defeating Calgary Dinmies 7-0, Calgary Ladies 5-0 and Edmonton B-6-1 and had trouble only with Saskatchewan before winning 3-2.

Jan Crook scored eight goals in the four round-robin games while Lynn Becroft added five. Cindy James and Cindy Bray both fired three while Carrie Crookshanks and Cynthia McAlpine each got one.

In Sunday's other games, New England rallied for a 28-23 victory over San Diego, Pittsburgh battered New York Jets 28-17, Miami downed St. Louis 24-10, Minnesota ripped Tampa Bay 24-7, Buffalo defeated Kansas City 28-17, Atlanta nipped New York Giants 23-20, Houston edged Cleveland 16-13, Los Angeles beat New Orleans 26-20, Philadelphia nipped Baltimore 17-14, San Francisco downed Cincinnati 28-12, Denver defeated Seattle 28-7 and Oakland whipped Chicago 25-19 in overtime.

Dallas plays at Washington tonight.

Holdovers Don Lever and Ron Sedbauer scored Vancouver's other goals while Mike McEwen and Phil Esposito

Oakland used Errol Mann's fourth field goal, a 29-yarder with five seconds left on the clock, to tie the Chicago and then won the game in overtime when Neal Colzie returned an interception 24 yards and Art Whittington swept in from the two-yard line.

"I may have ulcers soon." That's how quarterback Steve Grogan viewed New England's second straight last-minute victory, this one against San Diego.

Grogan scored the winning TD on a four-yard run with 31 seconds left to play after the Patriots had blown an early lead.

Toni Fritsch's 19-yard field goal with 14 seconds left lifted Houston past Cleveland. Jim Zorn completed 24 of 38 passes for the Seahawks, but Denver turned three interceptions into touchdowns.

"When you live by the sword, you die by the sword," noted Denver coach Red Miller.

Los Angeles won its fifth straight game on fourth-quarter field goals of 34 and 39 yards by rookie Frank Corral, who earlier had missed two other field goal tries and an extra point.

Pittsburgh won its fifth straight game as Terry Bradshaw passed for three touchdowns against New York. Lynn Swann caught two of Bradshaw's TD pitches.

Minnesota gained revenge for its upset loss two weeks

GRANNY TAKES NATIONAL RACING CROWN

FREEPORT, N.Y. (AP)—

Betty Cook, a 55-year-old grandmother from California, won the Guy Lombardo Memorial Gold Cup race Saturday to capture the national championship of the Offshore Power Boat Association.

Cook, winner of the world championship last year, piloted her boat over the 178-nautical-mile course in two hours, 29 minutes to collect first prize of $10,500 and earn 400 points that enabled her to overtake Joey Ippolito for the national title.

Roy Hartsfield Will be Back

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto

Blue Jays have ended speculation by announcing that field manager Roy Hartsfield and his five-man coaching staff will be back with the American League baseball team in 1979.

Hartsfield was appointed field manager of the expansion club on Sept. 22, 1976.

Swedes Front and Centre

Times News Services

Swedish players were in the Vancouver Canucks' spotlight Sunday.

Thomas Gradin, one of four acquired by Vancouver's National Hockey League team, fired two successive goals in the second period to lead the Canucks to a 4-2 exhibition victory over New York Rangers before 10,388 fans in the PNE Coliseum in Vancouver.

Victory was marred, however, by an injury to defence-man Lars Lindgren. He suffered a bruised kneecap and was carried off the ice in the second period. Coach Harry Neale said Lindgren will be sidelined for at least two games.

Holdovers Don Lever and Ron Sedbauer scored Vancouver's other goals while Mike McEwen and Phil Esposito replied for the Rangers, who have won only one and tied two in six exhibition starts.

Led by veteran centre Don Luce, who scored twice within a 21-second span, the Sabres returned to Buffalo on Sunday and trimmed New York Islanders 5-3 in another pre-season game. The result stoned for Saturday's 5-0 Sabre loss to the Islanders in Uniondale.

In other NHL exhibition games Sunday, Montreal Canadiens showed that they're at home on any ice as they pounded Philadelphia Flyers 5-1 in the Spectrum; Chicago Black Hawks hammered Toronto Maple Leafs 6-1, and Colorado Rockies edged Detroit Red Wings 3-2.

Rookie centre Steve Tambellini scored twice for Islanders in Buffalo.

The Canadians go against Senegal on Tuesday. "We must win tomorrow and then we are sure of being in the semi-finals," said Donohue. "I don't know anything about Senegal and I am not taking any chances."

BOMBERS REBOUND TO BEAT LIONS

Eskis Romp Over Alouettes

By The Canadian Press
What had been billed as a Grey Cup rematch in Montreal, a stunning upset in Regina, a second-half surge in Vancouver and a rain-marred game in Toronto, all highlighted a busy weekend in the Canadian Football League.

In Montreal on Sunday, the Western Conference-leading Edmonton Eskimos gained a measure of revenge for their 41-6 loss to the Alouettes in the 1977 Grey Cup game with a 42-22 triumph over Montreal in a game on a rain-soaked field.

At Regina, the lowly-regarded Saskatchewan Roughriders came up with a last-minute field goal by Bob Macoritti to edge Calgary Stampeders 20-19. The victory was only the third of the season for Saskatchewan against nine losses.

At Vancouver Saturday, Winnipeg Blue Bombers left their fighting instincts in the dressing room at half-time and turned their efforts towards a methodical 34-27 destruction of British Columbia Lions.

The Bombers, losing defensive end Greg Johnson and running back Richard Crump through fighting ejections in the first half, scored 31 second-half points — 21 in the third quarter — as they all but eliminated the Lions from the Western Conference playoffs.

In Toronto on Saturday night, the opening kickoff was delayed 45 minutes because of a heavy downpour and things did not improve for the Argonauts when the skies cleared.

Tight end Tony Gabriel scored an 81-yard touchdown on Ottawa's second play from scrimmage and the Rough Riders went on to a 34-0 victory.

Quarterback Tom Wilkinson of Edmonton took advantage of an injury-riddled Montreal secondary and threw two touchdown passes to Waddell Smith as well as others to Brian Fryer and Tom Scott. Jim Germany got the fifth Edmonton major on a two-yard run.

The only positive aspect of the game for the Alouettes was the return of veteran quarterback Sonny Wade, who had missed nine games after being injured early in the season.

Wade threw two touchdown passes to Peter Dalla Riva and another to Larry Smith for the team's first major scores in 10 quarters of play. At Regina, Calgary's loss evened the Stampeders' record at four wins and four losses with three ties.

Saskatchewan quarterback Ron Lancaster threw touchdown passes of 13 and 10 yards to Freeman Johns. Macoritti converted both, kicked three singles and the game-winning field goal.

James Sykes scored both Calgary touchdowns, the first on a 67-yard kickoff return and the other on a two-yard run.

Lancaster also achieved a career mark of more than 50,000 yards passing in the game and running back Mike Strickland became the first player in the CFL this season to rush for 1,000 yards.

Brook of the Bombers put on a brilliant leadership display against the Lions to rebound from a 17-7 halftime deficit.

Brook threw two touchdown passes to wide receiver Joe Poplawski in the third quarter and one to running back Jim Washington in the first half. Washington added another major on a nine-yard run in the second half and Brook scored another on a draw play.

Bernie Ruoff converted all five touchdowns and added a 46-yard field goal.

Larry Key and John Henry White each scored a B.C. major on the ground and Terry Bailey got the other on a 33-yard pass from reserve quarterback Gary Keithley. Lou Passaglia converted the three majors, kicked two field goals and one single.

The Lions, in losing for the sixth consecutive time while Winnipeg won its sixth in a row, had 414 net yards, but were able to score only one second-half touchdown.

Jauch said the Bombers still have a chance of catching first-place Edmonton in the WFC title hunt, with one game remaining against the Eskimos.

"We've improved 200 per cent since the first of the season," Jauch said.

"We're not conceding first place to anyone at this stage. I want first place and we're going out after it."

DRANE WINS CLIMB BUT CAN'T CRACK 19-YEAR RECORD

Steve Drane of Victoria shattered the air and left his opponents in the dust — but still couldn't topple an old record — while winning the Victoria Motorcycle Club's 54th annual Mt. Douglas hillclimb Sunday at Mt. Douglas Park.

Drane collected the Island title and the F.W. Francis Trophy after gunning his six-cylinder Honda 1,000 up the hill in 5.38 seconds.

But the record of 5.25, set by Wes Morehart on a 650 BSA in 1959, emerged unscathed.

Dan Mangano of Port Angeles was second on a 750 Yamaha in 5.67 and Bob Norman of Portland was third on a 650 Yamaha in 5.81.

Deane also won the closed VMC championship while Terry Anderson was second and Hank Lovett third.

In the 350 open class, Vern Armor of Vancouver — a former VMC member and two-time Canadian motocross champion — finished first on a KTM-250. Dave Solway of Port Angeles was second on a Honda 250 and Ron Hyde of Victoria was third on a Yamaha 350.

Imagine — no more tire changeovers! Simply buy Tiempo radials and keep them on season after season. You save the cost of 2 extra winter tires. You save time and money. And you avoid the risk of damage to your tires — every Fall and Spring.

This gas-saving radial is built tough with double steel belts. Takes plenty of punishment, lasts much longer than bias-ply tires. In summer, the centre "whisper" rib gives you a quiet ride over hot roads. In winter, the computer-designed tread (with some 10,000 biting edges) gives you snow tire traction — even on glare ice.

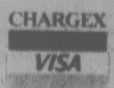

Act now — and eliminate winter tire changeovers

Late Goal Surge
Rescues WestsSOCCER VIKINGS
IMPROVE CHANCES

SASKATOON — University of Victoria Vikings haven't worked their way out of the woods yet, but coach Brian Hughes likes their chances much better today than he did a week ago.

The defending champions took a big step towards retaining their Western Canada University Athletic Association soccer title by blanking Saskatchewan Huskies 2-0 Saturday.

Vikings thus took over the lead in the tight, five-team conference with a 2-1-2, won-lost-tied record. Huskies (2-2-1), who defeated Calgary Dinosaurs 1-0 Friday, hold down second.

The conference winners will represent the CWUAA in the national finals in Montreal Nov. 9-11.

Victoria has three games remaining, including two at home. Vikings host Calgary Oct. 14 and Alberta Golden Bears on Oct. 28 and have an Oct. 18 date with UBC Thunderbirds in Vancouver.

Saskatchewan has a home-and-home series with Alberta and a match in Calgary.

Dan Lomas opened scoring for Vikings on a penalty kick at the five-minute mark. Dave Secco scored the insurance goal 20 minutes later and an alert Victoria defence contained the surprising Huskies the rest of the way.

Victoria West escaped defeat Sunday by charging from behind in the final few minutes to erase a 2-1 deficit and topple Powell River 3-2 at Topaz Park in a first division match of the Vancouver Island Soccer League.

In other matches played Sunday, Nanaimo United edged Gorge 3-2 at Nanaimo while Duncan Selects and Oak Bay played to a 1-1 deadlock in Duncan.

On Saturday, Victoria Athletics mauled Nanaimo City 7-1 at Royal Athletic Park.

Dan Henry scored twice to lead the Wests and Garnet Moen produced one marker. George Orchison and Phillip Calligos replied for Powell River.

Ron Sage (2) and Laury Grey scored for Nanaimo United while Yosu Iruretagoyena and Howie Kirk countered for Gorge.

Graham Gow scored the goal for Selects and John Nash answered for Oak Bay.

On Saturday, Dan Hood fired three tallies to spark the Athletics. Gordie Manzini, Gil Windley, George Hyne and Mark Robb supplied single goals for Athletics.

Leon Cake connected for Nanaimo.

French National Team
Strong in Second Half

CALGARY (CP) — In the first-ever meeting of the two countries on a rugby field, the French national team overcame stubborn first-half resistance and defeated a select Canadian team 24-9 before 4,000 fans at the Kingsland Ground on Saturday.

Canada had opportunities to grab an early lead through three penalty-goal attempts, but Ro Hindson missed twice and Preston Wiley failed on the other chance.

Displaying increased alertness as the match progressed, France opened the scoring after 22 minutes play when the French backs swept the ball along the line to the right and fullback Jean-Michel Aguirre was in place to kick behind defenders.

Right-winger Louis Bilbao beat the Canadian defence to ball for a try, which was unconverted to leave the tourists with a 4-0 lead.

Canada's forwards were holding their own in the lineouts and set scrums, and the loose rucks did the French have a marked advantage.

The home team reduced the margin to a point when Bilbao was penalized for obstructing winger Ron Stapleton on a quick throw-in and Wiley connected for a penalty goal from 25 yards.

France restored its lead to four points just before the half when Aguirre kicked a penalty goal from 30 yards after Canada's Spence McTavish was penalized for not releasing the ball after a tackle.

Canada faltered for the first part of the second half and France took full advantage by scoring three unanswered tries.

Centre Christian Belascain forced his way over for an unconverted try, then leftwinger Guy Noves outpaced the Canadian cover to score another, which Bernard Vives converted.

The third French try of the second half came from their outstanding flanker, Jean-Pierre Rives. Rives missed with a convert and the score was 21-3.

Canada reduced the deficit through a good try by prop-forward Ken Peace, who plunged over after fine forward play involving Hindson, Gary Johnson and Jack Shaw. Wiley converted from a sharp angle to bring the score to 21-9.

In the dying minutes, Canada was penalized for offside in a loose ruck and Vives kicked the last points of the match with a penalty from 25 yards.

Vancouver Island players on the Canadian side included Johnson, Dwaine Van Eeuwen and K.C. Walt.

Shooting Victories

SEOUL (AP) — The Swedish women's team and the Finnish men's squad gave their countries two gold medals each in air pistol competition Sunday, the fourth day of the eight-day world shooting championships.

Kerstin Harnsson of Sweden scored 382 out of a possible 400 points in winning the women's individual 10-metre championship and paced her three-member squad to the team title with 1,129 points to 1,108 for Australia.

In men's competition, Palo Kangas of Finland shot 391 for the gold medal as his team edged Brazil by a single point.

More than 1,000 shooters from 66 countries are competing for a total of 369 medals in 21 events.

In the absence of the Russian and East European shooters, the United States and West Germany have emerged as favorites. The Americans have eight gold medals and the Germans five so far.

PIGGOTT AND ALLEGED REPEAT IN RICH PARIS RACE

Slew Didn't Change Angel's Mind

Times News Services
After the Marlboro Cup, Angel Cordero said Seattle Slew was the best horse he'd ever ridden. Slew did nothing to change the jockey's mind Saturday in the $163,000 Woodward Stakes at Belmont Park.

Seattle Slew turned in a second straight sizzling, front-running performance to win the Woodward and become the thirdbred racing's 23rd millionaire.

Cordero put Seattle Slew in the lead a few furlongs out of the gate and he stayed there, equaling the stakes record of 2:00 set by the great Kelso in 1961. The time also smashed the Belmont track record of 2:01 4-5 for a 1 1/4-mile race started on the turn, which was set by Upper Nile last July 4.

"If I rode him hard today and in the Marlboro, he could have broken the track record both times," said Cordero. "But they don't pay off on track records."

Slew finished four lengths ahead of Exceller, who was ridden by Bill Shoemaker. Shoemaker then headed for an airport to catch a flight to Paris, where he rode Trillion Sunday in Prix de l'Arc-de-Triomphe.

Following the race, Mickey Taylor, a co-owner of Seattle Slew, said he wasn't sure what the colt's next start would be. "Options are the Jockey Club Gold Cup, Vosburgh or the Turf Classic," he said. "That's all that's left."

Slew, who will go to stud at the end of this year under a $14 million syndication, was stalked all the way by Exceller. It's Freezing was another 6 1/2 lengths back and neck in front of Great Contractor.

Shoemaker guided Trillion to a second-place finish in Paris as Lester Piggott rode Alleged into the history books by winning the $585,000 Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe, Europe's richest horse race, for the second straight year.

Piggott shook off the challenge of Shoemaker and Trillion to win the $279,000 first prize. Freddie Head on Dancing Maid was third.

Alleged, trained in Ireland by Vincent O'Brien, is the first horse since Ribot in 1955 and 1956 to win twice running. The four-year-old American-bred colt started as favorite at odds of 7-5.

Piggott, well placed throughout, eased his mount to the front 1 1/4 furlongs (300 metres) from the post and took the race by two lengths. Cordero had a successful

Sunday ride in the $54,150 Flower Bowl Handicap at New York's Belmont Park, urging Waya through a tremendous stretch run to beat Magnificence by three-quarters of a length.

Waya ran the 1 1/4-mile race for fillies and mares in 2:00 3-5 to overcome Magnificence, a 50-1 shot.

At Toronto Saturday, Overskate proved that he is the best three-year-old in Canada by demolishing his archrival Regal Embrace and five other three-year-olds to win the featured 1 1/2-mile Breeders Stakes at Woodbine Racetrack by 3 1/2 lengths over Satania in 2:29 2-5 on turf.

Mr. Senator, coupled with Overskate as the Stafford Farms entry, finished third.

Overskate picked up a purse of $32,000 to bring his bankroll for the year to $187,436. Last year the colt earned $117,020.

Jockey Robin Platts never touched Overskate with his whip. The colt was under a hand ride the entire route as it battled Regal Embrace, which dropped back at the far turn and came in a struggling fifth.

The race was Overskate's fifth consecutive victory since finishing second by a neck to Regal Embrace in the Queen's Plate last June.

At Vancouver, Title Victory came from off the pace as usual to beat Silky Steel by half a length Saturday in the $30,000-added Ballerina Stakes for fillies and mares at Exhibition Park.

Title Victory, a five-year-old, rounded into form only recently, winning an allowance race Sept. 22 for its first victory of the season in 15 starts.

Title Victory, ridden by Brian Johnson, trailed the field by as much as 20 lengths at one stage but started moving down the backstretch and was third coming into the stretch. Pallos finished third, nine lengths back.

Title Victory earned $22,345 as she covered the 1 1/8 miles on a muddy track in 1:57 2-5.

SOVIET TEAM WINS VOLLEYBALL TITLE

ROME (Reuter) — The Soviet Union won the men's world volleyball championship Sunday, beating Italy 15-10, 15-13, 15-1 before 16,000 fans.

Defending champion Poland lost to China 12-15, 15-13, 11-15, 15-13 in a match for seventh. In the consolation round in Venice, the United States blanked Canada 15-4, 15-9, 15-8 and got 19th place. Finland gained 17th place trouncing Belgium.

Roger Pennington, with a field goal and conversion, and Bob Burns, with a try, counted for Hillside.

Dr. Gil Grabs the Big Cheque; Watson Claims Some Records

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Gil Morgan got the title. Tom Watson nailed down some record-setting seasonal championships. And Jack Nicklaus left it up in the air whether he'd come back.

A three-putt bogey by Hubert Green on the first sudden-death playoff hole opened it up for Morgan's routine, two-putt par to clinch the $100,000 first prize Sunday in the World Series of Golf.

The front-running Green opened the cool fall day with a two-shot advantage, built it to four with birdies on his first three holes, then had his ancient putter turn balky on him. A couple of three-putt bogeys and a six-foot par-saving putt that wouldn't fall, let the sturdy, unemotional Morgan take a one-shot lead. Going to the 72nd hole, Hubert had to have a birdie to tie. He hit a five-wood second shot to about 15 feet, and this time the putter worked. He got the birdie he had to have to send it into overtime. But a misread second putt on the first playoff hole settled it—and cost him $55,000, the difference between Morgan's winner's share and the check for second place.

Morgan had a final round of 68, including a 30-foot eagle putt on the second hole, and Green shot 70 to finish at 278.

Watson, meanwhile, took third alone at 278. But his check for $19,000 pushed his season's earnings to $362,429, breaking the single-season record of $333,021 set by Johnny Miller in 1974.

It also appears certain that Watson, a five-time winner this year, will win Player-of-the-Year honors and take the Vardon Trophy for the leading stroke average on the tour. He won all three titles last year and becomes the first man to sweep those three honors in consecutive years.

Nicklaus, generally regarded as the greatest player the game has known, has never won the Vardon Trophy simply because he's never played in enough tournaments. And he'll play in even fewer. He named 10 events in which he will definitely compete next season, but did not mention this event. He said, however, there may be additions to his schedule.

The World Series of Golf poses a problem, he said, because of its late-season dates.

Defending champion Lanny Wadkins had a 66, the best round of the final day, that lifted him to fourth at 282. Tom Kite and Hale Irwin followed at 71-283 and 72-284 respectively.

CONFIDENT JANE TAKES LPGA TITLE

CALABASAS, Calif. (AP) — Jane Blalock, confident and steady despite constant pressure from Hollis Stacy, shot a 71 Sunday to win the $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament by two strokes.

The leader since the first day of the 72-hole tournament, Blalock finished at 12-under-par 276. Stacy, starting the final round just a stroke behind Blalock, shot a closing 72 to finish second at 278.

Donna Caponi Young, playing her home course, fired a five-under-par 67 to finish alone in third place at 279, one shot ahead of Alexandra Reinhardt.

Blalock, who had earlier rounds of 67-68-70, played extremely steady if not spectacular golf Sunday, with two birdies and one bogey on her card.

Stacy, playing in the group in front of Blalock, was less consistent. She had four birdies and an equal number of bogeys, including one on the 16th.

Cards Renew Boyer Pact For One Year

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals have renewed the contract of manager Ken Boyer through the 1979 National League baseball season, based on the ex-Cardinal third baseman's "proper blend of managerial qualities."

A written statement from August A. Busch Jr., the club's chief executive officer, described the 47-year-old Boyer as a pilot possessing "an ability to communicate with the players" tempered with "proper firmness when necessary."

Boyer, who played 11 years with St. Louis and was the NL's most valuable player in 1964, was hired by the Cards on April 29.

Small Can Be Attractive

By PAULINE GRAVES

An attractive home depends not at all upon size. In fact, a small room many times is easier to decorate and furnish than one that is large. To make a large room warm and inviting requires a good eye for scale and color.

These factors have to be considered when decorating a small room, too, but somehow it is simpler to select and place strategically, enough large furniture to make a room look like a home and not a hotel lobby.

A case in point is the small breakfast room seen on this page, decorated by Beverly Trupp. The 9-foot by 10-foot room would barely accommodate a table and four chairs, even though they were relatively small.

To get extra inches of floor space, the grouping was placed off centre, but this left not enough room for chairs next to the walls.

Built-in benches along the walls under the corner windows solved the problem. They are nicely styled with wings at each end for a Provincial look.

Accessories amplify the Provincial style, such as the scalloped plate rail around the window top, and the ruffled tie-back. Also, the bench back has a three-inch return at the top which lines up with the window sill and provides space for plants in containers.

Cushions in the same small-patterned print as that in the curtains cover the bench seats and backs as well as the chairs.

Shopping by Computer

MIAMI (AP) — Local shoppers who have trouble keeping track of all those supermarket specials now can get help from a computer. It picks the best buys each week from among 85,000 grocery items, and it's even suggesting a week's worth of menus.

"We've got it to the point where it's telling you what to eat," said Mike Shulman, a spokesman for the Consumer Computer community-action project that already is helping 5,500 people do their marketing. There is no charge for the service.

Each week, food specials advertised by seven supermarket chains are punched into the computer. The machine breaks down the package price of each product into cost per unit weight.

"That's the sort of information you'd only get by using a calculator or crawling around on your hands and knees trying to read the edges of shelves," said Shulman.

The computer compares the price against what the same product was selling for a week ago, as well as with the average for the preceding year.

But the computer is doing even more.

"It takes the data and feeds it against a standard set of 500 menu plans from the U.S. department of agriculture," said Shulman. "Using both sets of information, the computer produces 30 menus a week. Each meal includes meat, bread, starch, beverage, dessert, a fruit and a snack."

Whenever possible, the menus include items that are on sale.

Various community service organizations receive the information free of charge and distribute it to young people, welfare families and anyone who requests it.

The intricate program was designed by Mark Geigel, a 21-year-old computer scientist who graduated from the University of Miami just last year.

"I had an interest in nutrition and a lot of computer experience," Geigel said. "So it kind of struck me that one would be good with the other."

DISEASE DATA

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — A United States computer-time salesman has been given a $5,000 donation to set up a computer information centre for children's diseases.

David Maynard of the Children's Medical Information Centre project said he is trying to organize a system that will provide child-disease information for North American doctors at the touch of a computer key.

However, Maynard, originally from Cleveland, Ohio, said Friday that the service may be a few years away because developing a uniform medical language for a computer program is difficult.

The money donated to Maynard's project was part of $14,000 raised in May to pay for medical treatment required by one-year-old Shannon Clark. Fund trustees made the contribution because they raised $10,000 more than the treatment cost, Maynard said.

Shannon now is successfully receiving special magnetic treatment in a Boston hospital to repair a gap in her esophagus.

TOYS DANGEROUS

OTTAWA (CP) — Curious George, Chick-A-Dee, Puppy Love and Scooby Doo have been ordered recalled by the federal government because of dangerous levels of lead in the painted lettering on their shirts.

Curious George is a stuffed monkey, Chick-A-Dee is a stuffed Easter chick and Puppy Love and Scooby Doo are stuffed dogs all distributed by Ganz Brothers Ltd.

The department of consumer and corporate affairs said that the company had recovered about 90 per cent of recent shipments of the children's toys.

But it warned parents who have already purchased one of the toys to take it away from their children because of the danger of toxic lead being ingested.

"I am concerned for young children who tend to put everything into their mouths," the department quoted Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand as saying.

"Although the amount of lead in any one toy is insufficient to cause alarm, lead is a cumulative poison."

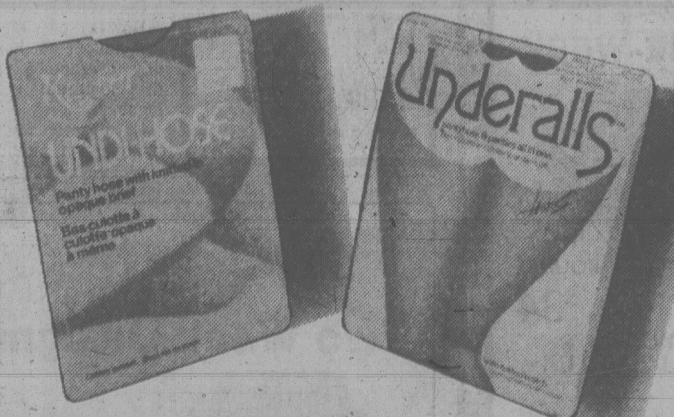

The department said Ganz Brothers plans to distribute a new line of the toys with the lead lettering on the shirt replaced by a raised fibre type of lettering which would not be hazardous.

DEAR ABBY: I have a new daughter-in-law whom I adore, but I wish she wouldn't work so hard to put on a fancy dinner for Dad and me!

I think it's commendable that she wants everything to be perfect, but she tries so hard to impress us with the most complicated gourmet meals that I feel guilty knowing how much trouble she has gone to.

I wouldn't hurt her feelings by offering to "help" her, but believe me, she could use some help.

The first 30 minutes after our arrival, she's in the kitchen struggling with about six different kinds of hot hors d'oeuvres. And all during dinner she is either in the kitchen or serving us.

I wish I could tell her that if she'd just throw some hamburgers on the grill, slice a few tomatoes, and open up a quart of ice cream for dessert, we would love it!

But how can I tell that dear young thing we'd rather have her company and simple food than a gourmet's delight? — RIVERSIDE

DEAR RIVERSIDE: You can't. And oddly enough, even some older, more experienced cooks need to learn that guests want a host or hostess — not a ghost or ghostess!

Plain food served in a relaxed atmosphere is far more enjoyable than the most elegant gourmet feast presented by a worn out, fretful, nervous wreck, who has obviously slaved for hours.

DEAR ABBY: I am a reasonably attractive, well-balanced young lady of 24, and I'm sure I could make some nice young man a good wife, as well as a good mother to the children I'd love to have. My problem is this: Given a choice between two men with whom to fall in love — a nice, respectable, steadily employed man, or a good-for-nothing bum — I invariably choose the bum.

-Can you tell me why? Is it because, deep down, I have an unconscious liking for abuse? (The bums take my money and treat me badly.) Or could it be that I deliberately avoid the good prospects because I really don't want to get married yet?

I am asking you because I can't afford to go to a psychiatrist. — ATTRACTED TO BUMS

DEAR ATTRACTED: I wouldn't presume to tell you why you invariably pick the bums over the respectable men, but if you are interested in finding out, try your local mental health clinic.

You say you can't afford to go to a psychiatrist. I say you can't afford to go on picking the bums over the nice guys. You may become disgusted, convince yourself that you don't deserve anything better, and marry one.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ETHEL GRAHAM VANCE — wherever you are — Thank you for these profound lines!

LOW-SODIUM SALT INVENTED

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — A four-year study that involved two hospitals, a doctor and a college home economics department has developed a low-sodium salt substitute that "tastes good," a Milwaukee company reports.

The company said the new product could be used on a regular basis by persons with high blood pressure, heart or weight problems.

Wixon-Milwaukee Spice Corp. said its research began when Dr. Earl Buske, Milwaukee, approached them for help after being told to remove salt from his diet.

The doctor said the problem was that too many salt substitutes were on the market but many contained a high level of sodium, which is contrary to the needs of low-sodium diets.

Some companies sought to solve the problem by using potassium chloride to lower the sodium, but the result was a bitter metallic taste.

Wixon said its study during the four years involved staff doctors and dietitians at Milwaukee's St. Luke's and St. Joseph's hospitals and home economics students at Mount Mary College, also in Milwaukee.

By late 1977, the company said, three seasons were produced that are low in carbohydrates and consist entirely of natural ingredients.

The seasons are considered dietetically sodium free, with a sodium content ranging from 15 to 33 milligrams per 100 grams. By comparison, ordinary table salt has more than 38,650 milligrams of sodium per 100 grams.

Wixon said the substitutes will be marketed under the name Flavor Secrets Low Sodium Seasoners.

By Ken J. Michaels Oct. by Toronto Sun Syndicate

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:
Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your birthmonth readings. Check the scales on the left or right for your intellectual, emotional and physical factors, from 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:
0-5 Negative Cycle: If an unfavorable situation arises at work take time to think carefully about your words and actions.
6-10 Neutral Cycle: Use common sense if you're asked to take on a potentially dangerous job. Don't take unnecessary risks.
11-15 Positive Cycle: If you apply yourself things are bound to get a lot better. Don't worry about small money matters.

Did the novel genius Horatio Nelson have help from his birthmonth on October 21, 1805? That was the day of the Battle of Trafalgar, when the British won an overwhelming victory over the combined fleets of France and Spain. Nelson's Bio-dex showed a high peak that day, meaning that his body, brain and emotions were all at their highest pitch. Why not check your Bio-dex before your next major battle?

Man Couldn't Get Fuel Pump Back wheels

Dear Mike: This is an emergency. I can't get the fuel pump back on my 1973 Plymouth. The old one leaked, so I was going to install a rebuilt pump. Getting the original fuel pump off was no big deal, but I've been wrestling with this new one for about eight hours now and can't get the bolts to start in the holes in the block. This is the 400-cid V-8. I've checked and rechecked to make sure it's the right pump. The old and new gaskets do match. I even checked the local library's 1973 Plymouth shop manual, but it doesn't tell how to install the pump (assuming, I suppose, that it's too simple to bother explaining). What's the trick? — TEARING HAIR

Dear Tearing: There's a pushrod that goes from the camshaft to the fuel pump. Often this rod slips down at an angle and blocks the re-installation of a new pump. To get at the pushrod, use an Allen wrench to remove the plug just below the fuel-pump hole. Then poke the pushrod upward with a screwdriver.

The pump should now go on without difficulty.

Dear Mike: The windshield wipers on my 1973 Le Mans chatter whenever I turn them on. The chattering has become so bad lately that I sometimes drive in the rain without the wipers. I've bought several replacement blades, paying as much as $5 a set, but they still chatter. Help — it's driving me nuts. — GOING NUTS

Dear Going: Check spring tension in the wiper arm. Sometimes the springs get weak and don't draw the blades tightly against the glass.

Dear Mike: A peculiar sound comes from somewhere inside the working parts of my 1978 VW Rabbit. It's a peculiar metallic, tinny whine that sounds every time I step on the accelerator. When I let up on the pedal, the noise disappears, but as soon as I accelerate again, it's back. I've taken the car to the dealer repeatedly. The mechanics say it's nothing to worry about. I'd appreciate your opinion. — BAFLED

Dear Baffled: Sounds like an exhaust problem: something loose inside the muffler, perhaps, or a poor connection between functions. It could be dangerous. Ask your dealer or an independent shop to check out the entire exhaust system.

The Cardin Label Goes Airborne

By NINA S. HYDE

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — It is the penultimate designer label status item, a $2.3-million executive jet, and Pierre Cardin was at National Airport's Page Terminal to see his design and to dot the "i" on his signature near the door.

"You like it, you like it?" asked Cardin to those around him, breaking into the smile of a shy student being handed his first A-plus graded paper, as he got his first look at the sleek black, red and white jet.

Inside the twin-engine transcontinental-range jet made by American Aviation, Cardin played like a delighted kid with the slide-away tables and push-button telephone. "The press will like it, too, don't you think?" he asked.

So the Cardin label is now on just about everything: fragrances and furniture, cars and bikes, chocolates and carpets, bathrooms and kitchens, clothes, of course, plus food, wine and theater. Can there be anything else? Cardin can't think of what it might be, but of course there will be something else.

"There is always something else to design," he says. "A great deal depends on where life takes you."

Recently life took him to Korea where he saw a Pierre Cardin shop filled with items with his logo. He had authorized neither the shop nor the goods. In Indonesia he saw a tie with a Cardin label, but an Yves Saint-Laurent print lining.

"You buy something with a label because you trust the design and quality. But if it is not mine, then you are being cheated," Cardin said. "And I am losing thousands and thousands of dollars, too."

Currently Cardin's name is worth at least $250 million annually, with 370 licensees making hundreds of Cardin-designed items sold in 40 countries, including Russia.

Pierre Cardin, 56, is his own best salesman, a promoter more clever than anyone he can hire. But in a quiet way, careful, soft, almost poetic. He is late for an appointment when no one is with him because, he says, he was strolling and lost track of time. He is known for having driven a battered Simca and a Chevrolet.

How is it possible for a man to find enough hours in the day to create all the things that legitimately boast his logo?

Cardin seems surprised at the question, although he has heard it often. He's heard the claims, too, of those who say they really do his designing and he denies that as well. "I have a studio of 20 people," Cardin begins. "They are technicians, specialists. I give them the shape, the material, the color, the volume. I give them the first sketches. They carry out the details like pockets, cuffs."

Suddenly he is out of his chair and starts "designing" a dress on a visitor. He slides an ashtray under the shoulder to show a changed shape, tugs at the hem of the blouse and skirt to show the rushed way he creates.

"Some designers sit back in a chair directing others to change the silhouette," he says, "but I pin, I cut, I do everything myself." Suddenly he stops, smiles shyly at his spontaneous "mannequin," and sits down.

CRANBROOK (CP) — A tentative agreement was reached during the weekend between six east Kootenay school boards and their non-teaching employees.

The 300 workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, have been locked out since August 1.

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed says he believes the time has come for Western Canada to have bigger say in Confederation.

In an address to the Calgary Chamber of Commerce's annual meeting, he said provincial governments must not be weakened by Ottawa's proposed constitutional changes and that decision-making must not be further centralized in Central Canada.

"I think that is the view, particularly in the West," he said, adding that he would take that position to this month's constitutional conference.

Turning to the Canadian economic picture, Lougheed said Alberta was not an economic island separated from the rest of Canada.

He said a new provincial corporate tax incentive system probably would be introduced when the Alberta legislature resumes sitting Oct. 11.

He said the system would involve small business, but declined to release any details.

CLC POLICY 'SHIFTING POLITICAL TRENCHES'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian Labor Congress president Dennis McDermott accused the federal government of "economic illiteracy and complete idiocy" at the weekend Manitoba Federation of Labor convention.

McDermott, fresh from a CLC staff seminar in Quebec attended by federal NDP leader Ed Broadbent, promised a "new political posture for the CLC" in his speech to about 400 delegates.

He said economics cannot be separated from politics, and "from this point on the CLC, which formerly stood aloof from politics, will be in there front and centre."

McDermott lashed out at what he termed the "antics" of the federal government in recent months.

First, he said, the government told Canadians to tighten their belts, and then, a few weeks later, a new finance minister tells them to "spend, spend, spend."

Bill Broad, president of the National union of Provincial Government Employees, joined in the criticism of the federal government, saying it fails to ensure Canadian workers the rights it demands for workers in other nations.

He said many labor statutes in Canada and the provinces are contrary to the position taken by Canada with the United Nations International Labor Organization.

"We must demand that... all laws in the country at least meet the international standards Canada says must apply to every country."

He said many provincial statutes violate Convention 87 of the International Labor Organization which guaranteed in 1948 the freedom to organize and the freedom of association.

College Protest
'Nothing Personal'

NANAIMO (CP) — Teachers at Malaspina College here are not protesting against the appointment of a new college president because he apparently wants instructors to spend more time on campus, says the vice-president of the faculty association.

Ian Johnston said faculty and staff want the search for a new president to be reopened because they feel a competent Canadian can be found to do the job.

Jack Nutt, currently president of Highland Community College in Kansas, was appointed to the position last week.

Following the appointment, college council president Beryl Bennett said teachers were complaining because of the new president's view on faculty time on campus.

College officials said Nutt was appointed because a suitable Canadian could not be found for the job.

Johnston also denied Bennett's claim that only a few teachers had complained. He said the entire faculty association and the majority of other college staff are protesting against the appointment.

The faculty is not threatening strike action over the dispute, Johnston added.

Immigration officials have reviewed the appointment and are to meet with the college's search committee next week.

Drapeau Feels Probe
Won't Kill Re-Election

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau is confident the current provincial inquiry into construction costs of the 1976 Olympic Games will not damage his campaign for re-election for his seventh term.

"The (inquiry) commission will do its work and I'll do mine," the 62-year-old mayor said in an interview broadcast Sunday on CJAD.

"On Nov. 12 we'll find out whether there has been any effect, and if it's good or bad."

Drapeau said he has no intention of mixing the current constitutional debate with his campaign for re-election in the Nov. 12 civic elections.

"It would be a ridiculous exaggeration my part to think that citizens of Montreal are waiting for a pronouncement from me before deciding what side to take," he said.

"They know I'm a federalist and the separatists know I'm a federalist, but separation or federalism has nothing to do with municipal affairs as I see them, and as I think the majority of citizens of Montreal see them."

Drapeau has been criticized for his silence on the question of constitutional reform by Liberal MP Serge Joyal, a candidate for mayor for the Municipal Action Group, one of two opposition parties contesting the election.

MOUNTAIN-CARVING IDEA
BECOMING 'HOT POTATO'

EDMONTON (CP) — A $1-million plan to carve impressions on an Alberta mountain, much like the profiles sculptured on Mount Rushmore in South Dakota, has been put before the provincial government.

The plan comes from Alan Harrison, 49, a former advertising display artist who now runs a building cleaning business and works as a service manager for a dry cleaning centre in Edmonton.

The unnamed mountain, 180 kilometres west of Red Deer, sits by the David Thompson Highway on the Cline River.

"The project is a hot potato," says Bern Evans, of the recreation, parks and wildlife department.

"Which department has the responsibility of considering whether a mountain face can be carved on or not?"

"There would be obvious political repercussions. Conservationists won't like the idea," Evans said.

"I got fed up with my kids being taught so much American history in school and thought this would really focus attention on our own history," Harrison says.

Sculptor John Weaver of Hope says if the right controls are established he would be willing to work on the project.

Conservationists will argue against the plan but I love mountains and believe that one in several hundred thousand can be spared for this," said Weaver, who recently moved from Edmonton to be nearer the mountains.

Act Permits
Immigrant Ads

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian officials say the federal government can do nothing about private immigration consultants in Metropolitan Toronto, which charge persons hoping to emigrate to Canada hundreds of dollars for services they can get free.

Under the Canadian Immigration Act, anyone is permitted to act as an immigration consultant.

One immigration official explained how the consultants operate:

"They place ads in Third World newspapers, and some even in Britain, giving the impression they can help get someone into Canada."

"They charge up to $250 to tell someone whether or not they have enough points to come here. Any immigration officer will tell an individual that for nothing."

"When they find out their client doesn't have enough points... they (tell) the individual his application can be upped by a Canadian job offer, and for another $100 or more, say they will look for a job for him."

Another official from Toronto said he knows of about two dozen such consultant firms and individuals in Metro.

The bidding:

South West North East
1 ♥ 2 ♣ 3 ♣ Pass
6 ♣ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣

South's leap of six hearts over North's three-heart response was justified. North had 13-15 points; and since West rated to have a good diamond suit for his overall, most of North's values rated to be in spades, hearts and clubs, which would consolidate South's holdings in those suits.

The king of diamonds opening lead was ruffed by South, after which a heart was led to dummy's queen. Another low diamond was then ruffed with the ten-spot. The jack of hearts was next overtaken by the board's king, picking up West's last trump en-route. South's device of clubs was now discarded on dummy's diamond ace, and this was followed by the ruffing of North's last diamond.

A spade was then led to the board's king, and a spade was returned to South's ace. Before ruffing his remaining spade, South carefully cashed the club ace. Now he trumped his remaining spade.

Since East had failed to follow to the fourth diamond lead, West was marked with an original holding of six diamonds. West had also followed to three spade leads, two trump leads and one club. West could have, at most, one club remaining in his hand.

A club was next led out of dummy, East putting up the ten. South covered with the queen, and West won the trick with his king — and, simultaneously, became end played. He had no choice but to return a diamond, which was ruffed in dummy as South, on this trick, discarded his remaining low club.

Had East possessed the club king, South's queen of clubs would have become the latter's slam-going trick. And, it will be noted, if South had not cashed the ace of clubs before leading a club off dummy, West, upon winning the queen with the club king, would have merely returned the nine of clubs, thus avoiding the end play.

Margaret Now Off to Sydney

FUNAFUTI, Tuvalu—Princess Margaret, still shaky from the effects of a high fever which caused her to miss Tuvalu's independence celebrations, left today for Sydney, Australia, aboard a New Zealand Air Force plane.

The sudden illness meant that the 48-year-old princess had to stay in bed on a New Zealand frigate as the British Union Jack flag was hoisted down to mark the end of colonial rule and the emergence of the world's second-smallest independent country.

With only 8,000 inhabitants, the nine coral atolls which make up Tuvalu — formerly the Ellice Islands — have become the newest member of the British Commonwealth. Only Nauru, another South Pacific state with a population of 7,000, is smaller.

Princess Margaret was to have represented the Queen at the independence ceremony.

Before leaving Tuvalu the princess chatted briefly at the airport. Minister Toalipi Lauti and waved at a group of 20 sarong-clad island girls who sang and danced for her.

HARTFORD, Conn. — The gathering to mark the 143rd birthday of Mark Twain at his Hartford home was slightly different to the one the author himself would have chosen.

"Usually there would be theatre," said Twain aficionado Atwood Collins. "He'd put on a show, and he'd have the children act. Then you might adjourn to the third floor for billiards."

For the party Saturday at the Twain memorial on Farmington Avenue, there was a cake in the shape of steamboat, and banjo music for the 100 Twain fans who showed up.

JERUSALEM — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin was released from a hospital Sunday after a two-day stay.

A spokesman for the 65-year-old prime minister said Begin was feeling "very well" and would be spending the Jewish New Year holiday at home with his family.

McCarthy's Creator Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There will be no more insults from wooden-headed, wisecracking Charlie McCarthy: his voice is forever stilled.

And gap-toothed Mortimer Snerd is a real dummy once more.

Their creator, ventriloquist Edgar Bergen, died Saturday in his sleep after a heart attack.

Bergen, who modelled McCarthy after a cocky Irish newsboy 56 years ago, will be remembered at funeral services Tuesday in Beverly Hills.

The 75-year-old entertainer died four days into an 11-day farewell engagement at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, in what was to have been his final road tour.

Two weeks earlier, he had announced plans to retire and donate his wooden sidekicks — top-hatted, monocled

McCarthy, dull-witted Snerd and spry spinster Effie Klinker — to the Smithsonian Institution.

Bergen was born in Chicago on Feb. 16, 1903, to Swedish parents, who ran a retail dairy business. The inspiration for Charlie McCarthy came to the young Bergen in 1922 in the form of a newsboy who sold papers in his neighborhood.

Bergen sketched the newsboy and took the drawings to a carpenter who made the dummy's head for $35.

727 Pilot Tried to Stop Plane's Death Dive

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The pilot of a Boeing 727 struggled for 30 seconds to right his craft after a mid-air collision that resulted in the worst air crash in U.S. history, the head of a government investigation team said Sunday.

"The pilot's last words, 'We're going down,' were very casual," said Rudolph Kapustin of the National Transportation Safety Board. "It indicates that he may have thought he still had some hope of controlling the airplane."

Kapustin, who heads a 100-man team investigating the cause of the crash, promised to make public today a transcript of the recorded conversation between air traffic controllers and the pilots of the two planes.

The Pacific Southwest Airlines jet and a small Cessna collided Sept. 23 over the North Park residential area of San Diego.

Officials put the death count in the crash at 144 Sunday. It was reduced from 150 when it was discovered that six people who had been believed killed on the ground were not in their homes at the time of the crash.

Kapustin said in an interview Sunday that the casualty of Captain James McPheron may indicate he thought the damage to his plane was not destructive.

Kapustin said there was some indication that the collision which damaged the jetliner's right wing did not entirely knock out the plane's steering mechanism. He explained that a hinged section along the trailing edge of the plane's right wing, which enables a pilot to control rolling movements, was deflected and pointing upward.

Kapustin said the impact of the collision may have ruptured the plane's hydraulic system, which controls some steering and braking. Some have questioned why the jet, in its final approach, was unable to glide toward the water or the airport.

Instead, it plummeted into the residential area, wiping out two blocks of homes and killing seven people on the ground.

Kapustin said fire broke out in the jet, indicating the fuel tank erupted when the two planes collided 2,600 feet above the ground.

Kapustin said recorded conversation in the jet's cockpit would be made public at a hearing that may be held next month. But he said he was unable to find any truth to published reports of bantering and joking in the cockpit of the 727.

Although Kapustin was uncertain how many people were in the cockpit, he said after studying the tapes that there was no indication either the pilot or co-pilot was distracted. There have been reports that two off-duty PSA pilots joined the regular three-man crew in the cockpit of the Sacramento-to-San Diego flight.

There was no voice recorder inside the single-engine Cessna, in which a flying instructor was helping a U.S. Marine Corps sergeant practice his landing approach.

About 500 persons attended an outdoor memorial to the victims Sunday.

Margaret Trudeau - a Bit Of a Teaser in France?

TORONTO (CP) — What is it about the attitude of Frenchmen toward women that Margaret Trudeau finds unappealing?

"The level of their jokes, the way they talk about women and the way women put up with what's going down," she said in an interview shown Sunday on the CTV Television Network's program W5, which was filmed in France.

She said that for this reason she was developing a reputation as a teaser.

"I don't find it distasteful. I just find it very different than the way we've evolved as... a Canadian girl like myself."

Mrs. Trudeau was in France making a movie when the CTV interview took place. It has been suggested she got the role because of her link with Prime Minister Trudeau.

She said: "I can't ride on my name. I have to have talent if I'm going to be in the film industry..." Richard Hellman, a co-producer of film, said her name was one of the reasons she was chosen to play the role of the wife of an aging, wealthy Frenchman vacationing on the Riviera.

Her lack of experience was not important because the demands of the part were suited to her experience.

One of the problems Margaret experienced was that she does not speak French well. After a few stabs at doing her lines in French she switched to English.

"Pierre (Trudeau) thinks it would be very good for me to learn French... really well because the children are starting to learn French and I'm going to be left out in the family if I'm the only non-French-speaking person," she said.

Margaret said she was pursuing her career and free to live her own lifestyle.

Did that include friendships with men, including romances?

"Well, I can't live without friends. Who can?" she replied.

Clark Defends Tories' Mortgage Proposal

TORONTO (CP) — The Progressive Conservative proposal to help homeowners write off mortgages against income taxes is an essential policy for creating jobs and helping the Canadian economy grow, Opposition Leader Joe Clark said Sunday night.

Speaking briefly at a party rally in York-Scarborough, where one of 15 federal byelections is to be held Oct. 16, Clark said the Liberals have criticized the proposal but have been singularly silent about what they plan to do.

He said Prime Minister Trudeau has criticized the plan as helping the rich while doing nothing for those living in apartments or who already own their homes.

Clark said Trudeau is defining as a rich person anyone who owns his home or wants to.

The Tory candidate in the riding, largest in Canada with 620 polls, is Paul McCrossan, an insurance actuary.

River Diversion Put to Vote

NELSON (CP) — Twelve of the 20 electoral areas in the Central Kootenay regional district will hold a referendum Nov. 18 on the proposed Kootenay River diversion even though the referendum might be against the law.

At a board meeting, elected representatives from Castlegar, Nakusp, New Denver, Silverton and Slocan, plus seven other areas in the district gave letters of consent to hold the referendum.

The bylaw authorizing the referendum will come up for formal adoption at the next regional district meeting.

Reid Henderson, regional district administrator, has said that a vote on something not covered by district funding could be interpreted as an illegal expenditure of public funds and individual representatives could be charged with the cost of the vote.

Areas whose representatives did not provide the necessary letter of consent included Kaslo, Creston, and four other areas. There was no response from Salmo on the issue and Nelson city council will decide next week whether to proceed with its own referendum.

Henderson said Sunday that communities whose regional representative did not give a letter of consent may still hold their own referendum if the town council wishes.

He also said the municipal affairs ministry will likely withhold approval of the bylaw because the diversion is beyond regional district authority.

Lorne Nicolson, NDP MLA for Nelson-Creston who was at the meeting, said he could not see how people can be penalized for a democratic and responsible action.

Slocan Valley representative Norman Brewster said the referendum might "offend the sensibilities of those in the government who support (B.C. Hydro chairman Robert) Bonner."

Preparing For that Big Step: Quitting Smoking

By DAVID COTTER

WELL here we go with this, the first of a 13-part series in which freelance writer David Cotter describes his personal success in stopping smoking — and how you can, too. Today's story is introductory in nature and readers who want to quit smoking along with a number of Times newsroom employees in conjunction with the series, have until midnight on Oct. 10 to get geared up.

If you want to participate and you feel you'd like to go public with a declaration, drop a line with your name and address to "I quit, c/o The City Editor, Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4."

We'll print your names and you'll join the Times employees who are giving up the nicotine habit. The series will appear in the Times each Monday with the exception of next week when it will appear Tuesday due to the Thanksgiving holiday.

An old man is picked out of the ashes of another rooming house fire. The usual verdict: Smoking in bed.

A high-ranking executive swears off cigarettes at 9 a.m. A martini at noon sends him howling for a puff. In the intensive care unit of a hospital a tracheotomy victim smokes through a hole in his throat.

Tobacco — it's many things to many people. To most of those who use it, however, it is above all a dangerous habit they don't even like.

Times have changed since Mark Twain stopped quitting with a vengeance. Nine out of 10 people interviewed in a public health survey said they had tried (some repeatedly) to quit, or would if there were some way around the agonies of withdrawal. Publishers compete to provide the easiest and fastest way to stop smoking in one, three or five days. You can stop through self-hypnosis and meditation. Clubs and clinics compete for the would-be quitter's dollars.

More than two million Canadians have stopped smoking. Millions more, however, continue to jump on the wagon with wild enthusiasm, only to scramble off in a cold sweat.

Why? For one thing, the problems of withdrawal are compounded by the false expectations and hopes raised by the quick-buck artists. For another, smokers suffer from their own misunderstanding of the nature of their habit and from their own fear of withdrawal.

Too often, smoking is viewed as a purely physical problem, while in fact it consists of a fantastically interlocked chain of associations. Over the years, through constant repetition, it becomes a fundamental part of one's identity. Indeed, one smoker claimed that to smoke was to prove his existence.

While physical withdrawal lasts for roughly a week, general withdrawal usually lasts for about three months. It consists of tricks played by your mind to make you want to smoke. Some of the tricks resemble the symptoms of physical withdrawal.

Success in staying on the wagon depends almost entirely upon the attitudes and habits formed during those three months.

So let's be realistic and set Norman Vincent Peale aside. Positive thinking isn't enough. If it were, no one who honestly tried would have failed. Meditation won't do either. There will be days when you feel much too muddled to think, let alone meditate.

What about medical care tactics? By now most of us know a few of the facts but the problem is that we don't really believe those nasty things can happen to us.

So if you want to be successful, you must master the habit and not just look at it in the closet. You can't run from it forever or rely on substitutes. Mastery here, as in any other field, depends upon persistence, practice, study and self-discipline.

This series will consist of 12 weekly columns designed to be with you step by step through this period, and to help you achieve mastery.

Tips on surviving and easing withdrawal will be offered with insights into the habit and its peculiar hold on you. Along with medical facts you'll find startling quotes that are guaranteed to put you off. And, since the adventure is a personal one, I'll drop in from time to time with stories of my own to make it easier for you.

For the rest of the week keep on puffing. But think about the habit. When you have time, list in detail all the reasons you can think of for quitting. Think about why you haven't so far. Make an effort to be conscious of each cigarette and focus on the actual taste and smell.

I suggest you write to the Non-Smokers' Rights Association, 455 Spadina Ave., Suite 404, Toronto, Ontario, M5S 2G7. On a short visit there, I was given a convincing assortment of buttons, stickers, posters, desk cards and useful information. Do yourself a favor and let them supply you with visual ammo.

In the past you may have reasoned that the time wasn't right for you yet. Rest assured, it never will be. Something will always be happening to provide you with an easy excuse.

By way of example, when I quit I was working on two novels, studying Japanese for one hour a day, working eight hours a day, conducting an unhappy romance and entering the final stage of a two-year legal struggle to regain something I'd lost.

It wasn't the best of times. Then again, once you've set your sights on winning you won't be deterred by hassles, long hours or strain.

Isn't it about time your body took a stand against a habit it hates?

Next week we begin. Relax. You're about to have an adventure. This time you're not alone.

84-Cent Dollar Dropping

The Canadian dollar continued sliding against its American counterpart in opening trading on international money markets today.

The dollar opened at 84.19 cents U.S. on Toronto's inter-bank wholesale market, almost a quarter-of-a-cent down from Friday's close of 84.43 cents.

At noon today in New York, the Canadian dollar stood at 84.29 cents.

Meanwhile, the Swiss National Bank's weekend announcement that it will intervene on foreign exchange markets to reduce the exchange value of the Swiss franc pushed the U.S. dollar up to 1.5955 francs today. It closed at 1.5495 Friday.

The bank said in a statement it will increase the purchase of large quantities of U.S. dollars, and other currencies if necessary, to achieve "a speedy and lasting fall in the clearly overvalued franc exchange rate."

The dollar also gained against the British pound and the Japanese yen but slipped slightly against the mark and the French franc.

The pound was weakened by speculation that the Labor party at its annual conference opening today might force a confrontation with Prime Minister James Callaghan's government over its insistence on a five-per-cent limit in pay increases.

Charred Debris Raked

AYER'S CLIFF, Que. (CP) — Police continued their search today for three bodies in the burned-out Ripplecove Inn, where an early-morning fire Sunday claimed eight other victims, all members of a visiting Barrie, Ont., group.

The group, whose 47 members ranged in age from 65 to 80, were on the final day of a four-day trip to view Quebec's autumn foliage.

An all-day police search of the scene turned up the eight bodies. Three more members of the group remain unaccounted for, and police still expect to find their remains.

Late Sunday, 28 grief-stricken survivors of the Barrie Horticultural Society returned home on a plane chartered by the bus company which had brought them to this resort, 130 kilometres southeast of Montreal.

Eight other survivors remained overnight in hospital in nearby Sherbrooke.

The group had arrived from Quebec City on Friday. About half checked into the main building of the colonial-style resort, with the moving into the surrounding cottages.

Those who died were in the main building. Half the group, those who were in the two smaller buildings, weren't affected by the fire.

WINDSOR POSTIES AGAIN PICKET

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — About 40 of Windsor's 270 letter carriers were back on picket lines today saying they are dissatisfied with a tentative agreement reached last week between their union's national executive and the federal government.

John David, president Local 16 of the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada in Windsor, said the membership is getting a snow job from the national executive.

"It's not even a settlement as far as we're concerned."

He said Local 16 executive officers voted 9 to 4 Sunday to resume strike action. Local members meet tonight.

He said local executive officers from District 6, which covers most of southwestern Ontario, voted unanimously Sunday to reject the tentative agreement.

David accused the national leaders of selling out the membership by agreeing to terms that he said were less than what the government previously had offered.

"It's not even worth taking to the membership," he said. "Something has got to be done with our national office and we're going to start the ball rolling right here."

The national office has distributed a four-page report to members summarizing the tentative settlement.

Finn's Hijack Ends In Confusion

HELSINKI (AP) — Seven hours after Finnish police let a hijacker go home with his pistol and part of a ransom to spend a last night with his wife Sunday, they stormed the man's house and arrested him.

The hijacker, a building contractor who recently went bankrupt, forced the crew of a Finnish jet to fly 4,800 kilometres up and down Finland and as far south as Holland before releasing the last of his 48 hostages Sunday. No one was hurt.

Along the way 37-year-old Aarno Lamminporras collected $206,000 in ransom from Finnair and a Helsinki newspaper.

Authorities said they could determine no clearcut motive for the crime, but during one of the plane's stops, he demanded and got two bottles of whisky.

Nor was there any explanation why police stormed his home in Oulu, 560 kilometres north of Helsinki, seven hours after agreeing to his demand that he be allowed to spend Sunday night with his wife and surrender today.

Authorities said the hijacking began about 4 p.m. local time Saturday afternoon when Lamminporras entered the cockpit of the Finnair Super-Caravelle during a flight from Oulu to Helsinki, and pointed a pistol at the pilot.

The plane landed at Helsinki, flew back to Oulu, returned to Helsinki, flew to the Netherlands, then back to Helsinki and finally landed back in Oulu. Lamminporras freed 34 of those aboard during the first stop in Helsinki, 11 on the second stop, including a lawyer he had demanded be brought aboard, and the last three in Oulu after the government agreed to let him go home for the night.

Witnesses said the gunman appeared haggard as he was led away in handcuffs by black-jacketed police who sent police dogs into the house first and then followed them in.

If convicted of armed hijacking, Lamminporras could get two to 12 years in prison.

Off and Running To Port Hardy...

Al Forrest of Times ... interview on run with Howie

Al Howie is off and running for Port Hardy to raise funds for the United Way.

Howie, 33, sprinted away early this morning from the Crystal Pool and hopes to complete the 575-kilometre run within a week at the rate of 80 kilometres per day.

That's the equivalent of nearly one marathon before lunch and another one afterwards.

Howie has been keeping in shape by swimming every morning at Crystal Pool, followed by a marathon run during the day.

He was running for health — his own. But then he got the idea it would make the running more fun if he could help others as well. So he is seeking pledges to the United Way campaign.

All funds pledged for the Al Howie run go to United Way charities. Pledges can be made by phoning United Way at 385-6708 or in person.

There's $100 promised so far to the United Way by one individual if Howie makes it and campaign officials are hopeful more people will come forward.

Howie selected Port Hardy because it is at the far tip of Vancouver Island from Victoria.

Born in Scotland, Howie ran as a schoolboy but gave it up at 18 in favor of soft living and heavy smoking.

"Then one day, when I was 26, I suddenly realized what I was doing to myself. I was smoking two packs a day and I wasn't getting any exercise at all."

"I quit smoking and started running. I felt better immediately."

Howie is travelling light to Port Hardy, with only the clothes he is wearing. He has taken some money for food and hotels but hopes he meets some folks along the way who will give him shelter for the night because all expenses are coming out of his own pocket.

"I don't have a job at the moment and I don't have a lot of money. I have been a stonemason and a foundry worker. I hope to find a job soon."

Meanwhile, $125,000 has been raised after the first week in the United Way campaign. The target is $926,500.

Times News Service

BEIRUT — Syrian commandos, advancing under cover of night and the heaviest local artillery and rocket barrage in three years, today rescued 50 Syrian soldiers trapped by Christian militiamen in east Beirut.

Rightists said 32 Lebanese were killed and more than 200 wounded in the overnight flareup.

Sixteen buildings were demolished and 61 apartments set on fire as Syrian peace-keeping troops and Christian forces pounded each other with rockets, mortar and artillery fire.

Prompted by the new surge of violence, President Elias Sarkis has called for formation of an emergency coalition government.

Sarkis, in a desperate bid to stop the fighting, announced "an emergency security plan" that included a call for a new government to be made up of "the principal Lebanese personalities."

Sarkis, in a clear reference to the Christian rightists, blamed the fighting on "certain factions... that provoke the Arab peacekeeping force and then exploit the sensitivities which arise with any borrowed (Syrian) security force."

Minutes later, right-wing former president Camille Chamoun issued a terse counter-declaration, saying: "The only thing that remains now for Sarkis to do is resign."

A Syrian communique today said the trapped Syrian soldiers, including seven seriously wounded men, had been cut off for two days.

The two-hour rescue operation was carried out after negotiations with Christian political leaders failed to obtain release of the men, and militiamen opened machine-gun fire on the beleaguered unit in violation of the ceasefire agreement, the communique said.

A Christian spokesman charged that the Syrians broke the truce Sunday afternoon with an abortive attempt to get through to the besieged troops, who were trapped in a pharmacy they took over during a ceasefire that began Saturday.

CARTER TO EGYPT

CAIRO (AP) — President Carter will come to Egypt to witness the signing of the peace treaty between Egypt and Israel, President Anwar Sadat said today.

No date has been set for the visit, which officials say would depend on how fast Egyptian and Israeli negotiators can work out steps to implement the accords.

SPORTS

With their baseball season suddenly reduced to a single playoff game, Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees were battling in Boston today for the American League East pennant. The teams finished their regular season in a tie Sunday when the Red Sox blanked Toronto Blue Jays 5-0 while the Yankees were being whipped 9-2 by Cleveland Indians. Page 14.

American League batting champion Rod Carew vowed Sunday he would never again play baseball for Minnesota Twins after hearing of alleged remarks by club owner Calvin Griffith. Page 14.

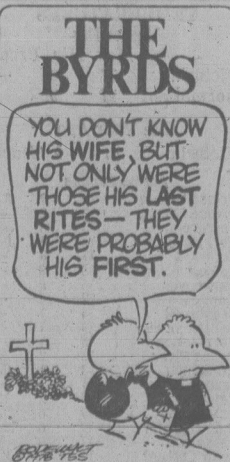

Saskatchewan Roughriders have given the B.C. Lions a stay of execution in the Western Football Conference. Defeated by Winnipeg Blue Bombers Saturday, the Lions had better luck Sunday. That was because the Roughriders tripped Calgary Stampeders, leaving the Lions with slightly better hopes of making the playoffs. Page 15.

Dr. Gil Morgan may be happy today that he never got around to practicing optometry. Morgan picked $100,000, the richest prize in professional golf, Sunday at Akron, Ohio, by winning the World Series of Golf, beating Hubert Green on the first hole of a playoff. Page 20.

Perhaps nervous because they were opening their Western Hockey League season on home ice, Victoria Cougars missed many chances Saturday, but still managed a 5-4 victory over Calgary Wranglers. Page 14.

Mario Andretti, this year's world driving champion, was thwarted by a blown engine Sunday in his bid to become the first American winner of the U.S. Grand Prix at Argentine Carlos Reutemann charged to a big early lead and coasted home to an easy triumph at Watkins Glen, N.Y. Page 12.

19-Storey Plunge After Lift Fails

CALGARY (CP) — A city woman plunged 19 floors to her death when she tried to jump from a stalled elevator in an apartment building.

Donna Moore, 29, and four companions were returning to her apartment at about 2:30 a.m. when the elevator in which they were riding stopped between the 19th and 20th floors.

Police said the five managed to crawl out of the elevator and while Moore's companions successfully jumped six feet from the elevator to the 19th floor Moore slipped when she landed on the floor, lost her balance and fell.
